TRUST HEAD TO HELP ORPET

GERMANS SAY THEY HOLD DOUAUMONT

HARVESTER MAGNATE WITNESS

Employer of Student's Father to Be Lambert Witness; Girl's Father Will Accuse the Youth

Waukegan, Ill., May 23.—While attorneys in the case of Will Orpet, charged with doing away with Marian Lambert, continued their plodding efforts today to get a jury, the defence sprung a surprise by subpoenaing Rufus H. McCormick, head of the International Harvester Company, as a character witness for the youth.

McCormick is the employer of Orpet's father and since the student first became involved in the death of the pretty Lake Forest school girl he has interested himself in the case.

AIDS EMPLOYE.

The elder Orpet has been head gardener on the palatial McCormick estate for years, and the young student now charged with murder practically grew up there. It was at the earnest solicitation of his old employer that McCormick decided to do what he could do to save the youth from the gallows or the penitentiary.

The work of getting a jury dragged woefully by today. The speed of yesterday, when four jurors were obtained, seemed to have tired both sides, and talesman after talesman was excused. One of the jurors who had been tentatively accepted when court adjourned last night was dismissed today, leaving but seven.

The prosecution, through State's Attorney Daly, announced today that the first witness to be called will be Frank Lambert, the aged father of Marian. He will tell how after a long search he came on the body of his daughter, lying in the snow in the bleak woods near Lake Forest on that frosty February morning. Following Lambert will come William Marshall, a professional golfer, who was with Lambert when he came upon the body.

TRUMP CARD READY.

Then the State plans to play its trump card—Josephine Davis, friend and confidante of Marian Lambert and who has been one of Orpet's bitterest accusers. Josephine, it is declared by

2500 Clothing Workers Here Go On Strike

Demanding shorter hours and higher wages, 2,500 clothing workers employed in 150 shops in and about Boston went on strike today. They are members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union of America and are supported in their demands by the national body. Pickets were posted at the various shops in the down-town section and an effort will be made to get others to join their ranks tomorrow.

"We are making progress and feel certain we'll win this strike," said an official of the union at the strike headquarters on Washington street today. "We expect to pull more out tomorrow. We intend to conduct an orderly strike. Our demands are embodied in an agreement and call for the wages which existed in 1915."

There was great enthusiasm at the strike headquarters when the workers from the different shops appeared. The agreement was to strike at 10 a. m. and many quit at that hour. Others quit at 11 a. m. More showed up at headquarters at noon. Some of the manufacturers, it was claimed, promised to sign the new agreement before night.

Runaway of 12 Aims at Chicago, but Hits Woburn

A small boy with a small suitcase, wet, footsore and hungry, limped into Woburn square this noon. The first policeman he met sized him up with one question:

"Runaway?"

He was and he had had enough. His name is William De Ross, twelve years old, son of Mrs. Allee De Ross of No. 8 Spring Hill terrace, Somerville.

Dear Mother:

I'm going to Chicago. I'll write you when I get there. This town is too slow for me. Love and kisses.

WILLIE.

Willie had told the boys at the Proctor school he had a little money for food and that he would make the distance on the freight cars.

But it was a rainy night and he's only twelve years old and the longer he tramped the farther he was getting from "Dear Mother" and "love and kisses."

So Woburn was his runaway limit and, by the same token, Somerville will be fast enough for Willie for a while.

KIDNAPING TOLD ON STAND

Mrs. Carpenter Tells How Son Was Seized at Hotel; Cross-Examined by Husband's Counsel

Concord, N. H., May 23.—After Mrs. Marguerite Carpenter, testifying in her husband's divorce suit, had described how her husband, Ralph Carpenter, kidnaped their child from her in Magnolia, Mrs. Carpenter's cross-examination began today.

Mrs. Carpenter told how she and the boy started across the street near the cottage where she was living in Magnolia, and how she sent Ralph back to the cottage for something she had forgotten.

"It was then they took little Ralph," she said. "He screamed. He said: 'Save me, Muddy! Save me, Muddy!' I had told him to scream if any one ever attempted to take him. They threw a coat over his head."

Mrs. Carpenter had previously described her acquaintance with J. Gould Day, one of the two men named in the case by her husband; and in connection with one incident she said:

"I did not sit in his lap. I did not shake down my skirts. I did not sit in the same chair with him."

When her direct testimony was finished, Judge Kivel asked her whether she thought it was discreet or within the proprieties to sit on a dark piazza with the men named in the case when her husband was not living with her.

TEARS IN EYES.

She said she sat there so that she might be within hearing distance if the little boy called to her; and as she answered these questions there were tears in her eyes.

After a recess, Senator Nathaniel Martin began his cross-examination of Mrs. Carpenter.

He began by drawing from her statements as to the amount of money given her by George A. Carpenter, Ralph Carpenter's father, during their early married life. She said this allowance

DOUBLE FUNERAL FOR AGED COUPLE

The double funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Hanson, aged seventy-seven and seventy-five years respectively, was held today from the home of their son, William S. Hanson, Sagamore avenue, Winthrop.

The services for Mrs. Hanson were directed by the Rev. Walter J. Sherman of the Union Congregational Church, Winthrop. Those of her husband were in charge of the Winthrop Lodge, A. F. of A. M., under the direction of Worshipful Master George Stevenson. The bodies were shipped to Portland, Me., for burial.

ASK $10,000,000 TO DEEPEN MERRIMACK

Washington, May 23.—Officials of the boards of trade of Lawrence, Lowell and Haverhill, Mass., and members of Congress from Massachusetts today appealed to the board of army engineers for rivers and harbors to recommend that Congress provide $10,000,000 for the improvement of the Merrimack River from Lowell to the sea.

"MATE" TO ACCUSE WAITE

Mrs. Horton, 'Studio Companion,' Eager to Testify in Poison Case; Expert on Witness Stand

By International News Service.

New York, May 23.—Two women, one of them dreading the ordeal and the other presenting a calm demeanor, are awaiting the call to the witness stand in the trial of Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, on the charge of poisoning his father-in-law, John E. Peck.

One of them, Mrs. Clara Peck Waite, wife of the man on trial for his life, presents the most pathetic phase of the trial. Sitting in a room near Justice Shearn's courtroom, she is in deadly fear that the shock of telling the story of her wealthy father's murder may so unnerve her that she will not be able to testify.

EAGER TO TESTIFY.

The other woman is Mrs. Margaret Horton, Waite's "studio companion."

Unlike Mrs. Waite, she apparently is eager to testify. The witness stand has no terrors for her. It is understood that Mrs. Horton's testimony will furnish the sensation of the trial. This was hinted at in District Attorney Swann's opening address yesterday.

It is expected that Mrs. Waite will be called to the stand today after the State has established the fact that Peck died of arsenic.

The same cool manner that marked Waite's appearance in court yesterday to begin his fight for life was manifest in Dr. Waite's appearance when he entered the courtroom.

POISON EXPERT TESTIFIES.

The first witness today was Dr. Victor Vaughn, a pathologist of the University of Michigan, who is said to have discovered the arsenic in Peck's body after an analysis of the stomach and brain. He qualified as an expert on poisons.

Dr. Vaughn identified the contents of two glass jars, containing the

The Casualty Company of America, after five years of litigation, must pay Timothy S. Collins of Salem the sum to which he was entitled under a policy on the life of Patrick H. Collins, who died after a fall, in January, 1911. Collins, when he was unable to collect the amount of the policy, brought suit, and won a verdict to which the company took exception. The full Bench of the Supreme Court today overruled the exceptions. The amount due Collins is $7,362.50.

BATTLE AT VERDUN GROWS

Germans Hurl Selves Against French Along 25-Mile Front; Losses Said to Be Tremendous

London, May 23.—The most terrific fighting in the greatest battle of all history was in progress today around Verdun.

London experts believe the Russian troops are now fighting under the tricolor with the French.

The first successes gained by the French have been met by the Germans, who threw forward heavy forces during the night; and the battle that followed was substantially a hand-to-hand struggle clear around Verdun from Avocourt on the northwest to the heights of the Meuse on the southeast—a twenty-five-mile circuit.

The official bulletins agree on but one point—the severity of the fighting. On actual results they are flatly contradictory.

But that the fighting has been without parallel, and that the losses on both sides have been tremendous, is certain.

The fighting is divided roughly in three parts—that centring about Hill 304 and Dead Man's Hill; that centring about Fort Douaumont, and that southeast of Verdun on the heights of the Meuse.

The conflicting claims as to these three arenas may be summarized thus:

Dead's Man's Hill arena—Ger-

Britain's Munitions Bill Alone $15,000,000 a Day, Says Asquith

London, May 23.

ENGLAND is spending $15,000,000 a day for army and navy munitions, Premier Asquith announced in asking a vote of credit from Parliament tod ay.

He asked a vote of $1,500,000,000, bringing the total credits voted since the war began to $11,910,000,000, or about one-seventh England's total national wealth.

The daily expenditure, he said, had averaged $24,000,000 since April 1, of which $15,000,000 was for munitions.

Sums totalling $372,500,000 were loaned to the allies and the overseas dominions, the Premier said, in the period from April 1 to May 20 alone, while $87,500,000 was spent in that period for food supplies, railways and miscellaneous requirements.

KAISER HOLDS WAR COUNCIL AT BERLIN

By International News Service.

Amsterdam, May 23.—A great war council, attended by all the field marshals commanding German armies in the various theatres of war, is being held at Berlin, according to advices received here today.

The meeting is said to have been called by Emperor William as a result of the failure to capture Verdun and the dissatisfaction that developed among the leading commanders because of the fact that their forces had been weakened to help Crown Prince Frederick William in his futile drive on the Meuse River.

Dutch military leaders claim to have received information that the Verdun move was opposed by Field Marshal von Hindenburg and Field Marshal von Mackensen on the ground that the troops which would be necessarily sacrificed could be put to better use in the eastern theatre and in helping the Turks in Mesopotamia, but they were overruled.

TO GRANT ETTOR REQUEST FOR WARRANTS

Lawrence, May 23.—Judge Jeremiah J. Sullivan, in the District Court, today consented to issue warrants for the arrest of four police officers who drove Joseph J. Ettor, I. W. W. leader, out of town yesterday.

Attorney John P. Feeney of Boston, who with Attorney Thomas G. Conley and Ettor conferred with Judge Sullivan, announced that he would draw up the complaints with the names of the officers and return here with them tomorrow.

Ettor declared that he recognized Lieutenant Charles R. Vose as one of the men who took him out of bed in the Hotel Needham early in the morning. The others are said to be City Marshal Maurice McKenna and Inspectors Charles R. Woodcock and Patrick J. Morrissey.

Ettor, with the two attorneys, arrived in this city from Boston in an automobile, and shortly before noon the three men obtained an audience with Judge Sullivan.

Later Attorney Feeney said:

"Judge Sullivan has consented to issue processes against the defendants we will name, and on the complaints we will set forth. It is probable that we will charge false imprisonment and kidnaping or abduction against the four men. Commissioner James W. Cadogan will not be arrested, but will probably be summoned as a witness."

The party then started for Boston in the automobile, which was trailed by the city limits by a machine containing Marshal McKenna and Inspectors Woodcock, Morrissey and Hewett.

AMERICAN IS PREY ON HIGH SEA

Edna, on Way Home from Chile to U. S., is Captured Near Horn and is Taken Into Barbadoes

The news of the capture by a British warship of an American steamer, and the confiscation of her cargo, was brought to Boston today by the British steamer Hylas, in from Cape Town.

The Hylas stopped at Barbadoes for coal, and there saw the American steamer Edna, flying a white flag, indicating that she was a prize of war.

Inquiry developed the fact that the Edna sailed from Chilean ports, bound for an American port on the Atlantic seaboard. Just after she rounded the Horn she was captured by a British, who learned that her cargo consisted of nitrates, and at once seized the Edna, claiming that she was bound for a German port with contraband.

The Edna was in her course for the Atlantic seaboard of the United States when captured.

She was taken to Port Stanley, Falkland Islands, and there a prize crew was put aboard her and under escort of the auxiliary cruiser Orama, she was taken to Barbadoes, where her cargo was put aboard another ship and sent to England.

The Edna is owned by Sudden & Christensen of San Francisco, and was formerly the Mexican steamer Mazatlan, having been transferred to the American flag since the beginning of the war.

She was built in Bergen and is an oil burner.

Douaumont arena — French claim to have inflicted enormous losses and to have captured all of Fort Douaumont except the northeast corner. Germans claim to have repulsed all French attacks except in the centre, where the French made slight gains. Germans say Douaumont Fort is still firmly in their hands.

Southeastern arena — French claim to have made a successful surprise attack in the Bois des Chevaliers. Germans claim to have destroyed French trenches and repulsed a French attack.

The net results of the two days' fighting seems to have been a considerable territorial gain for the French in the Douaumont region. But the loss or gain of territory is of slight importance beside the enormous wastage of men on both sides.

The official report from Paris follows:

ATTACKS BREAK DOWN.

"In the region of Verdun the battle continued with extreme violence all night on both banks of the Meuse.

"On the left bank furious counter-attacks launched by the enemy against all our positions at Hill No. 304 were completely checked. West of Hill No. 304 in particular the enemy made heavy use of machines for throwing fire, which enabled him to penetrate one of our trenches, but a brilliant counter attack by our troops forced him to evacuate immediately all the occupied positions.

"To the east, despite a preparation made by an intense artillery fire, the enemy's attack, broken by our fire, was unable to approach our lines.

"On the right bank in the sector of Thiaumont and Douaumont, the battle continued with great bitterness. The enemy, who had during the night increased his attack in mass formation and suffered enormous loss, succeeded in reoccupying one of the trenches taken by us north of Thiaumont farm. Everywhere else we maintained our positions.

"Within Fort Douaumont we have continued to roll back the enemy, who, despite sharp resistance, now holds only the northeastern corner of the fort.

"On the heights of the Meuse a surprise attack executed by us in the Bois des Chevaliers gave successful results.

"The night was comparatively calm on the rest of the front."

BERLIN CLAIMS GAINS.

Today's official report from German army headquarters says:

"Western theatre of war—English plans for a counter attack southwest of Givenchy on Gohelle were discovered by our troops. Small English advances in the Reichecourt district were repulsed.

"In the Meuse district fighting was especially active because of the enemy's efforts in counter attack. On the left bank of the river German troops captured a French blockhouse south of Cumaud forest. Hostile attacks east of Hill No. 304 and on the south slope of the Le Mort Homme failed.

"On the right bank of the river violent infantry engagements were fought on the front from a point south of Thiaumont as far as Calonette forest. The French, after a strong artillery preparation, entered the first German positions, but were repulsed on the flanks in this sector by German counter-attacks.

"South of the village and south of the former Fort Douaumont the conflict is not yet finished. Fort Douaumont remains firmly in German hands. North west of Fort Vaux a sap temporarily occupied by the enemy was recaptured by us. The first and second French lines on Cumieres Height were destroyed by our blasting for a considerable distance.

"On the Meuse heights, southeast of Verdun, near Vaux-les-Palameix and Senoux, the enemy's attacks broke down in our curtain of fire. Small detachments which had entered our trenches were annihilated.

"An enemy aeroplane was shot down southwest of Vaillby.

"Eastern and Balkan theatres of war: The situation is unchanged."

BATTLE FOR HILL 304.

The Overseas News Agency's correspondent at the Verdun front thus remits the following account of the latest French attack on the German positions at Hill No. 304:

"The French brought fresh troops to this terrible sector, where already so many divisions had been reduced. We saw colored troops mixed in a new division with whites taken from elite regiments.

"The storming French troops had to follow a deep and completely unentrenched road so that the German batteries were enabled immediately to direct their fire upon the enemy. At the same time we maintained a curtain of fire from Esnes to Hill No. 319 and beyond.

"Three attacks were brilliantly executed by the French and methodically crushed by the German guns. During the third attack the German artillery caused horrible execution. The storming detachments ran back beyond Esnes. Thick masses of dead were visible in the open ground before Hill No. 310.

"The tenacity with which the French commander-in-chief repeated his attack proves the importance given to the loss of Hill No. 304 by the French."

Germans Drive Back at French Forces

Paris, May 23.—All night long on the Verdun front a furious battle raged between the French and the Germans. Over a line twenty-five miles wide German troops were hurled forward against the French positions, winning at some points, only to be thrown out by the French counter attacks.

West of Hill 304 the soldiers of the Crown Prince, after a bloody struggle, drove the French from some of their trenches, but before the Germans could organize their new positions they were overwhelmed by a counter-attack and forced to give up their conquered ground.

To the east of the Meuse the Germans assaulted the French position at the Thiaumont farm, driving the French from a trench. Caught under the fire of artillery, machine guns and musketry, the Germans suffered terrific losses, but fought doggedly until they had gained the earthworks.

RETAKE DOUAUMONT.

Only the northern part of Fort Douaumont, which the "Iron Brandenburgers" captured from the French on February 26, now remains in German hands.

GERMAN CASUALTY LISTS FAR BEHIND

By International News Service.

British Headquarters in France, May 23.—German casualty lists are so far in arrears that their totals as issued from time to time are in no wise representative. It is now known that the names of German prisoners and dead left in the trenches at the battle of Loos last September have only just been published as among the German missing.

PROTEST LEGION'S USE OF U. S. FLAG

Washington, May 23.—The United States government will make vigorous protest if the American Legion, organized in Canada, attempts to use the American flag on its emblem.

Officials made it plain today that if Americans engaging with any of the belligerents in the European war carry the American flag as their colors, a protest will be made.

WAR SUMMARY

The French by violent and successful attacks in the Douaumont sector, northwest of Verdun, have precipitated a vigorous battle along the whole Verdun front, according to today's reports.

The French claim to have recaptured most of Fort Douaumont, while the Germans say it is still firmly in their hands.

The Germans threw forward their forces against the line from Avocourt, across the Meuse to Vaux; and though the French say these attacks were repulsed, the fighting still continues desperate.

The French attack near Douaumont resulted in gains which cannot yet be accurately measured. The importance of their success will be more apparent when the number of prisoners they took is made known. So far, we only know the number of these prisoners was "enormous."

One thing is fairly certain, that if the attack had been meant as more than a counter attack, it would not have been made at Douaumont; for there the French fight at the greatest possible disadvantage, both because the position is a semi-salient, exposed to converging fires, and because of the difficulty of transport to that point.

The attack may be, however, the precursor of a general allied offensive.

The Italians are suffering heavily from the Austrian attack, and unless a decisive check is administered to the Austrian troops very soon, the whole Italian force to the east of Lake Garda and along the Isonzo must begin to withdraw or face the possibility of destruction. The number of prisoners is now about 25,000.

The Germans announce and the British admit that a German attack resulted in the capture of over a mile of British trenches. The British say the Germans captured 1,500 yards of trenches, and penetrated the British positions from 100 to 300 yards—a considerable advance as trench warfare is measured.

ITALIANS FORCED BACK

Vienna, May 23.—Before the furious drive of the Austro-Hungarians in the Tyrolese Alps the Italians have fallen back from seven to ten miles. The capture of the Italian position on the Lavrone Plateau is regarded by the Austrian military critics as one of the most important achievements of the Austro-Hungarians since they opened their offensive on the southwest front on May 14.

Using twelve-inch howitzers, the Austrians are now shelling the Italian positions around Arsiero, which lies in Italian territory six miles south of Costabella.

By the capture of Col Santo, Costabella and the ridge of Monte Maggio the Austro-Hungarians have opened the way for a double drive against Arsiero.

Although they have resisted stubbornly, the Italians have proved their inability to stand before the mighty artillery fire which the Austrians have concentrated against their positions.

In addition to the big gains in territory and the capture of fortified positions, the Austro-Hungarians have taken nearly 25,000 prisoners and approximately 175 guns since the offensive opened less than a fortnight ago.

That the Italian government and the Italian General Staff is worried by the continuous advance of the Teuton troops and the ever-growing menace to the lines of communication supplying the Italian army on the Isonzo, is seen in the frequent counsels of war and the proclamations which are being issued to reassure the Italian public.

While Field Marshal von Hoetzendorf is exerting his strongest infantry pressure in the Tyrolese Alps, the Italian positions all the way to the sea are being kept under artillery fire.

Unless the Italians are able to rally their forces for an effective counter blow, they may soon be calling upon the allies for aid. This would not be a surprising step, in view of the fact that Russia, Canada, New Zealand and Australia have sent troops into France to help the English forces.

In the event Italy's position grows virtually serious, Serbian troops may be transported across the Adriatic to help hold the victorious Austrian army in check.

Cinafarra Finds Italy Confident of Victory.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Rome, May 23.—Italy is having her "dark hour," but every one in the kingdom is assured that victory will ultimately crown Italian arms.

Italy had more than one aim when she went to war on the side of the allies. The chief of these objects was held in view when Italy decided to cast its lot with the entente powers. These were:

3—Absolute control of the Adriatic.

4—Destruction of the commercial alliance between the central powers and the Near East, which was working to the detriment of Italy. To these is now added:

5—Restoration of the independence of Serbia.

Prince Peter Di Scalea, a member of the Chamber of Deputies, and for many years Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who has been fighting at the front, gave me this statement on Italy's position in the war during a visit he just made to Rome on leave of absence.

"Italy was one of the last of the big powers to enter the war, and she may be one of the last to lay down arms. To our previous aims (chief of which was the redemption of Italian provinces) the resurrection of the kingdom of Serbia has now become one of the main scopes of Italy's war.

WARNS BRITAIN OF FAMINE PERIL

London, May 23.—Francis Dyke Acland, Financial Secretary of the Treasury, speaking in the House if Commons on the agricultural situation, made a somewhat disturbing statement.

It was imperative, Mr. Acland said, that farmers should drop their prejudices against the employment of female labor. A breakdown in home supplies was avoidable only if the labor situation did not grow worse.

The labor point of view greatly decreased production already had been reported, and even as things were going, it was feared that England could not hope to maintain her production on last year's level.

If more men were swept into the army from the farm she could escape famine only by diverting to importation of foodstuffs ships which are so urgently needed for the transport of munitions.

And," Mr. Acland concluded, "we are unable to say whether there will be ships to divert that way."

THE accompanying map of the immediate neighborhood of Verdun shows where some of the most furious fighting of the war has been going on for the past few days. The arrows show the direction of the attacks, both French and German. By a counter offensive in the proportions of a general drive the French forced their way into Fort Douaumont, long held by the Germans.

West of the Meuse the French attacked near Le Mort Homme and recaptured ground recently lost there.

Yellowstone Park—Nature's Laboratory

Yellowstone Park is the Vacationist's Utopia. There is no monotony in Yellowstone—each day brings you an entirely new set of wonders. You see strange geysers throwing out tons of boiling water, "paint-pots" bubbling as mild as Hoyer, canyons which are a riot of color surpassing description, waterfalls of immense height, wild animals in their native surroundings, petrified forests, and a thousand other even greater wonders.

You travel in comfortable stage-coaches or in your own automobile, the use of which, within the Park, has just recently been permitted. Every night you stop at a picturesque and well kept hostelry, located in a district particularly abounding in photographs.

The trip is made doubly enjoyable by going on the BURLINGTON. The most interesting country is passed in daylight. The unexcelled BURLINGTON Service is nationally famous. You can add comforts are of importance, everything for your ease is done, even to the starting and stopping of the train without jolts.

Come in and let us tell you what I know about Western travel. My services place you under no obligation whatever. If it is more convenient drop us a postal and I will send you our free booklet on Yellowstone.

ANOTHER U. S. CITIZEN HELD IN IRELAND

London, May 23.—That Mortimer O'Connor, a citizen of the United States, was arrested in North Kerry, Ireland, by the British military authorities, in connection with the political disturbances, was brought out today by the following written question of M. J. Flavin, M. P. The question, which was addressed to Under War Secretary H. J. Tennant, asks:

"1—Whether Mr. Tennant is aware that O'Connor, an American citizen, was arrested by the military at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Lovett, on May 15 at Abbey Donnez, North Kerry?

"2—Whether he would state the charge against O'Connor?

"3—Whether O'Connor claimed the protection of the United States consul at Queenstown?

"4—Whether he was arrested without any specific charge being made against him and without any trial?

"5—Whether his release has been ordered?"

It is understood that Baron Wimborne has been induced to withdraw the resignation of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland and that he will soon return to Dublin to resume his duties.

LAMBERT TRAGEDY IS AN UNUSUAL PUZZLE, WRITES DOROTHY DIX

By DOROTHY DIX.

Waukegan, Ill., May 23.—The more you delve into the Orpet case the more inscrutable its mystery becomes and the less able you feel to form any opinion of whether the pallid faced boy, who is being tried for the murder of his youthful sweetheart, is guilty of the crime with which he is charged or is the hapless victim of circumstantial evidence.

For Marian Lambert keeps the secret of her last moments with him in death, as she kept the secret of her love for him in her life, and that is another of the mysteries of this strange case.

There has been nothing weirder than the dual personality of this apparently simple and artless little schoolgirl who yet was deep and subtle enough to engage in a clandestine romance, right under the eyes of her parents and her teachers, without even once arousing their suspicion.

To all outward seeming, she was in no respect different from her schoolmates. She was blithe and carefree and happy. Apparently with no care or anxiety heavier on her mind than the morrow's lessons.

Yet we know that this innocent little child was deep in the mire of an illicit love affair, and that even while she joked and skylarked with her school chums that she knew the most torturing fear that can ever wring a woman's heart and lived for weeks in the covering shadow of black disgrace.

And we also know that this little young girl, this unsophisticated schoolgirl who had never been a hundred miles from home in her life, was callous enough to use the threat of impending motherhood to try to hold the youth she loved, even when she knew that this was not true.

It is these strange, contradictory elements of character in this girl of eighteen, who had the unholy wisdom of an old woman of the world, this child who had the strength to keep her own counsel and the finesse to deceive those who lived closest to her, that makes it so hard to even guess what she did at the very climax of her fate.

Was this merry-hearted girl so filled with despair that she took her own life? Was this easy-going girl so wrought upon with jealousy that she preferred to die to being forsaken for another? Because her sweetheart had proved false, did the world hold nothing else for this girl who was the very embodiment of life itself?

Or did she threaten her false lover with exposure, and did he kill her to silence her? And if he killed her, why was there no sign in the snow of the struggle there must have been between them, for strong young creatures do not tamely submit to death.

Not one of these theories seems tenable. Yet the girl was found dead in the woods whither she had gone with Orpet, and whether she had died by her own hand or by his no one but he knows.

"It is all so inexplicable," said one of Marian Lambert's teachers to me. "I cannot even yet reconcile what I knew of that girl with the revelations that have been made concerning her life. We thought we knew her well and find that we did not know her at all.

Does the constant association of the two sexes make of them precocious lovers?

Would Marian Lambert and Will Orpet not have been saved from temptation if one had gone to a girls' school and the other to a boys' school?

MUST FACE DANGER IN JUSTICE TO CHILDREN.

These are some of the questions on which the case is going to turn a searchlight.

It is a horrible thought even to suggest that the primrose path starts at the schoolroom door, but there have been so many tragedies of youthful love that ended in distress brought to our attention of late that the danger to one we must face in common justice to our children.

I put this question to a woman principal of a high school attended by both boys and girls and she answered it most emphatically.

"I think that it is criminal for boys and girls of fifteen and sixteen and thereabouts to be educated together," she replied. "It is all right for little children and perhaps all right for mature men and women in our higher colleges, who have some knowledge of life, and who are masters of themselves and their emotions, but for girls and boys who are just awakening to the fact of sex, who are fascinated by the thought of playing with love, it is as dangerous as playing with fire.

WORLD IN SUCH CASES ALWAYS BLAMES THE BOY.

"Now I am 'preached' I have taught mixed classes, and the tragedies that I have seen happen, time and again, have been heartbreaking. And, when I advocate separate schools for boys and girls I am thinking more of the safety of the boys than I am of the girls.

"The world in such cases always blames the boy. But I tell you in nine cases out of ten it is the girl who is at fault. The girls are the leaders nearly every schoolboy and girl love affair, and in this as strange as it seems.

"The average boy under twenty is pretty much of a child. Left to himself he doesn't think much about girls. He is more interested in games and athletics.

"He doesn't think about love. If you will notice boys who attend boys' schools are always bashful boys, girls and women younger than the boys who have been forced into premature consciousness by going to school with girls.

"Now a girl of sixteen or seventeen or eighteen is a woman. She is ten years older in reality than a boy of the same age and is the natural lures a boy into love making and flirtations.

GIRLS ARE AS DANGEROUS AS A DYNAMITE CHARGE.

"She is as dangerous as a charge of dynamite, and if I had a young son I would certainly send him to a boys' school to protect him from the girls. Believe me, boys are in more danger from girls than girls are from boys.

"In the course of a school year, many juvenile love letters come under the inspection of the teachers, and amazing tonically these letters are from the girls to the boys, and some are shocking beyond belief in their contents.

"You wouldn't believe that little innocent looking school girls could write them. You can only hope that they know nothing of what they say, but whether they do or not, they should have the temptation to indulge in morbid sentimentality removed from them.

"And another thing that I think is very pernicious is the too free discussion of questions of sex. Perhaps in the past we were overmodest on this subject. Certainly in the present, we are over frank. So much has been said about the so-called 'mystery of life' that children have developed a prurient curiosity in the matter.

"THE WORLD HAS GONE RAPIDLY SEX MAD."

"Girls and boys discuss with perfect freedom subjects which people of an older generation only mentioned to their physicians. They are sophisticated to the point of callousness, and to the disgustingly advanced use of certain drugs, such as has been brought out in the Orpet case.

"It is all very well to 'teach girls and boys something of the mysteries of their own natures, but the pendulum has swung too far. The world has gone rapidly sex mad. We have made that the chief topic of discussion in books and plays, whereas, in real life it is only a small part of things. After all, reticence and modesty are the best guards that any girl can have, or boy, either, for that matter."

So spoke this woman of experience, and it made me wonder if William Orpet and Marian Lambert were not victims of our educational theories, where we offer to children the apple of knowledge before their teeth are strong enough to bite it, and when we set their feet in perilous paths whose pitfalls they are too young and ignorant to escape.

the prosecution, will reveal secrets about Orpet's friendship with the youthful sweetheart that have hitherto been undreamed.

She will tell how she accompanied Marian Lambert to the Sacred Heart station that fatal afternoon, and swear that suicide was the thing furthest away from the mind of Marian when she entered the woods to meet Orpet. The Davis girl's testimony will mark the climax of the State's case.

TIME INOPPORTUNE, WILSON TELLS POPE

By International News Service.

Rome, May 23.—The Agenzia Nazionale says:

It is learned in Catholic circles that President Wilson recently wrote to the Pope that he was anxious to avoid conflic with Germany, but that he was unwilling to renounce the principle of humanity which was sanctioned by international law.

Regarding the possibility of his intervention with the Allied nations in favor of peace, President Wilson said it would be impossible for the United States to hasten with words the settlement of questions which must be solved by deeds.

The President added that for the present the American government did not regard as opportune the launching of any peace move.

REPORT ANOTHER GERMAN SHIP SUNK

London, May 23.—Russian submarines continue to harass German shipping in the Baltic. An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen quotes the Politiken to the effect that the German steamship Worms, 4,428 tons gross, and owned in Hamburg, is believed to have been one of the latest victims. The Worms left Sweden several days ago and has not reached Germany.

It is also reported that the Swedish steamship Rosalind 377 tons gross, struck a mine near Stockholm and sank. The crew was saved.

SILAS WILER DEAD; HAD BRIEF ILLNESS

Silas Wiler of No. 135 Commonwealth avenue, Allston, treasurer of the A. P. Sour Company, died at the Deaconess Hospital last night, following a brief illness. He was forty-eight years old.

Mr. Wiler was born in Bangor, Me., the son of the late William Wiler, a Civil War veteran. He is survived by his wife. He was a member of the Elks and Odd Fellows and was well-known throughout New England as a traveling man.

LONE MAN HERO AT CONVENTION OF WOMEN

By International News Service.

New York, May 23.—Showers and chill breezes marred the pleasure plans of the delegates concentrating here today for the thirteenth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, but the unfavorable weather conditions caused no decrease in the heat of the political campaign being waged between the two women who are candidates for the Federation's presidency.

The candidates are Mrs. J. E. Cowles of Los Angeles, Cal., and Mrs. Samuel B. Sneath of Tiffin, Ohio. The supporters of both claim victory as assured, but they overlook no argument that will gain votes for their candidate.

A merry battle is in progress today in an effort to clinch the support of Herschel T. Smith of Fulton, Ky., who is the only male delegate registered here. Mr. Smith is a bachelor and has a knowledge of politics that both the Cowles and Sneath factions wish to enlist. That far he has been noncommittal on the subject of the coming election, but he is willing to advocate the value of women's clubs on every opportunity.

"I am a hearty advocate of women's clubs," he said today. "I'm also a believer in suffrage. Every session of the convention is going to find me right there."

Mr. Smith is a plump and jolly man and has already become a great favorite among the delegates as he is among the "people that do things" back there in Fulton.

The New Jersey women entertained other delegates at a breakfast at the Essex Country Club at East Orange, N. J., today. The guests included members of the general Federation board, state presidents and members of the New York board. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison threw open their home at Llewelyn Park, N. J., for an afternoon to the delegates.

WARNING ISSUED BY PRESBYTERIANS

Atlantic City, N. J., May 23.—Conservative delegates to the Presbyterian General Assembly threw their support to the liberals today to defeat the radicals, who brought the charges of heresy against the New York Presbytery and the Union Theological Seminary. The result was that the committee on bills and overtures decided to present only a conciliatory resolution containing a warning to guard against a recurrence of the misunderstanding that precipitated the fight launched in the Cincinnati Presbytery.

SEE PEACE OUTLOOK IN INSURANCE RISE

London, May 23.—The underwriters are charging 50 per cent. to insure against a declaration of peace between Great Britain and Germany before January 1.

The rate indicates that in the underwriters' opinion the prospects for an early peace are better than two months ago, when the rate for the same risk was only 30 per cent.

Folks out along the Middlesex Fells are doing more than their share of complaining at the cold weather; for a week or so warm days come again they're expecting the "Back to Nature" dancers to play a return engagement.

The dancers appeared for the first time in Boston, under the leadership of Marshall Hall, and did this and that along and in the water, while a battery of cameras looked on with recording eyes.

Two Metropolitan Park policemen came along and thought of arresting some one, and then thought better of it and went on away; but the dancers —and Mr. Hall—went merrily along dancing, wading in the water and otherwise disporting themselves.

The girls in the group gave individual dances after the ensemble performance. Miss Abbie McKay was one of the stars in this performance. Other dancers—besides Mr. Hall—included Irene Langley, Grace Howland, Maybelle Langley and Winnifred Gilraine.

NAME MEDFORD CITY HALL COMMITTEE

Mayor Benjamin F. Haines of Medford today announced a building committee to take charge of the erection of the new Medford City Hall, agitation for which was started in 1855. The committee will meet on Thursday night to select a site and start architects at work.

Four former mayors on the committee are Lewis H. Lovering, Charles S. Baxter, Clifford M. Brewer and Charles S. Taylor. The other members of the committee are J. A. Wallace, E. B. Moore, M. W. Child, G. A. McCormack, N. J. Soderlund, C. S. Barnes and F. A. Newell.

M'CALL AND SENATE GUESTS OF MEDFORD

Governor McCall and the entire Senate will be the guests of Senator William H. Fay at his home, "Ridgedale," Medford, for luncheon tomorrow at one o'clock. Following the luncheon the party will visit the Governor's home in Winchester, returning to Medford at four o'clock, when they will be the guests of the city. A dinner will be served in the Medford Square House at six o'clock, at which the Medford city government will be present with the guests.

LAMAR MUST GO TO JAIL FORTHWITH

New York, May 23.—David Lamar has one more day of liberty before serving the term allotting yesterday to begin his sentence of two years' imprisonment for impersonating congressmen in a scheme to defraud J. P. Morgan & Co. and the United States Steel Corporation. The Federal authorities here received word that the United States Supreme Court, which recently affirmed the Lamar conviction, had denied his motion calling for Lamar's removal to jail.

SPAIN JOINS U. S. IN RED CROSS MOVE

Washington, May 23.—The Spanish Ambassador, Juan Riano, has conferred with Assistant Secretary Phillips at the State Department on ways and means of getting Red Cross supplies into the party. Spain will act with the United States in endeavoring to have the supplies admitted under a medus vivendi to guarantee their specific use.

CHILDREN CUPID RUSH OVERCOME SWAMPS BY SMOKE OFFICE

Brockton, May 23.—Four children of ex-Senator and Mrs. Louis E. P. Moreau were carried into the open air unconscious after the fire broke out in the their home, No. 251 Centre street, early today.

Two other children, Victor and Noelie, who were sleeping on the second floor, were assisted to the street with their father and mother by neighbors.

The fire is believed to have been started by a spark dropped by one of the two older sons, Raymond and Romeo, who arose early and attended the mission service at the Sacred Heart Church.

Mrs. Moreau, who slept on the first floor with her husband, was awakened some time later by the smell of smoke. She got up and discovered flames leaping from a closet outside her bedroom. The woman screamed for her husband, and attempted to extinguish the fire alone. Mr. Moreau, who was awakened by her cries, went to her assistance, but the fire gained headway. A neighbor, seeing the smoke issuing from a window, turned in an alarm.

When the firemen arrived, they learned that four children, ranging from the ages of twelve to nineteen, were asleep in the attic. Lieutenant McRae with Hosemen Hall, Gray and Carroll, raised ladders to the attic windows, and rescued Blanche, Annette, Bernice and Valentine, all of whom were unconscious.

They were taken to the home of Horace Parmenter, where Victor and Noelie, the other two children, were also cared for with their father and mother. Medical treatment was given the sufferers, and it was said that they would recover. The police estimate the damage at $2,500.

HIGH LIVING COST SOARS IN BERLIN

Berlin, May 23.—Food prices in Berlin have reached new high levels, while the public await anxiously the naming of a new "food dictator" to administer food supplies.

Hoarding and storing food in anticipation of strict government regulations. Some dealers have made fortunes in the last few days because of the "crisis." It is the general belief that there is sufficient food in Germany, but that defective distribution is responsible for the trouble.

CASEMENT LAWYER PREDICTS SURPRISE

Atlantic City, May 23.—"I do not think Sir Roger Casement will ever be executed," said Michael J. Francis Doyle of Philadelphia, who will defend the knight, adding: "There will be a tremendous surprise in the trial. The outcome of the case will establish a precedent that will be historical."

Report Four Ships Sunk.

London, May 23.—The French steamer Languedoc, the Italian bark Erminia, the Greek steamer Anastasios-Coronees and the Danish steamer Caria have been sunk.

So great is the rush of business at the marriage bureau that Mayor Curley today reorganized the employes of the city registrar's office from taking part in the preparedness parade with the rest of the City Hall employes.

The unprecedented activity of cupid has resulted in approximately 100 applications for marriage being filed this week, on which the five-day time limit will expire on or before Saturday. If the rush keeps up the city registrar and his assistants will probably receive about 100 more applications before Saturday.

The rush set in yesterday and when the clerks sorted and counted the applications today, they found seventy-five couples entered for the matrimonial sweepstakes. The highest figure for one day was reached a year ago when seventy-eight couples applied for marriage licenses.

Those who applied for licenses include two telephone operators, a stenographer who is to marry the treasurer of her firm, a department store superintendent and a lady owner and reporter. A man with five names is married a woman with four names.

The couple with the long names are Philippe Charles Jules Francois de Clamecy, fifty-six years old, widower, No. 13 Berwick park, consulting engineer; mother, Adele Charlotte Lee of Norfolk, Va.; father, Oscar Jules de Clamecy, Vertus, France, and Emily Atlanta Dutton Casey, widow, No. 278 Hemenway street, twenty-six years old; born Manchester, Eng.

Some of the others whose intentions were announced today are:

Henry Hixon Meyer, twenty, of Kansas City, Harvard law student, No. 127 Mt. Auburn street, Cambridge, to Anne Wales Brewster, twenty-two, No. 23 Sigourney street, Jamaica Plain.

Charles Hurd, twenty-six, No. 474 Cross street, Malden, treasurer, to Alice L. Meahan, twenty-four, stenographer, No. 112 Bartlett street.

Michael J. McDonnell, thirty, gas inspector, No. 117 Trapelo road, Belmont, to Anna Currier, twenty-eight years old, telephone operator, No. 15 Chinwood street.

James W. Burgoyne, forty-seven, No. 50 Hooker street, Dorchester, store superintendent, to Grace M. Carroll, thirty-one, No. 121 Saginaw avenue, Chelsea.

George Blaine Nicholson, thirty-four, No. 1093 North Eden street, Baltimore, hotel owner, to Helen Gertrude Hartford, No. 726 Commonwealth avenue, hair dresser.

Nicholas Robert Bowe, thirty-seven, policeman, Station 14, No. 20 Dover street, East Boston, to Margaret Louise McElligott, thirty, No. 1 Nicholas place, Cambridge.

Michael J. Tracey, forty-one, widower, No. 524 Columbus avenue, reporter, to Harriet May Olle, thirty-one, share worker, Norridgewock, Me.

Henry F. Harrell, forty, No. 53 Meacham road, Somerville, conductor, to Katherine D. Daley, twenty-three, No. 52 Myrtle street, telephone operator.

Cornelius A. Leary, twenty-seven, No. 44 Ashley street, East Boston, lineman, Supreme Court, to Agnes Revenue Service, Eleanor Rita McEnaney, twenty-two, New York, New England Telegraph & Telephone Co.

MRS. CARPENTER IN TEARS AS SHE TELLS OF KIDNAPING

stopped, but said she did not know whether it stopped because she told Mr. Carpenter he was a "rotten father-in-law." She said she considered Mr. Carpenter a "rotten father-in-law."

She said she never apologized to Mr. Carpenter for calling him a "rotten father-in-law."

As she took the stand today Mrs. Carpenter showed her first signs of nervousness. A heavy rain was falling outside and the most cheerful thing in the courtroom were the electric lights which blazed overhead.

"September 2, Friday, I was taken sick. Mr. Day did not call. Little Ralph had a stomach ache. I went to bed with Ralph. Mr. Day came until nearly 3 next morning.

NOT IN SAME CHAIR.

"On Saturday, September 4, I was still ill. I suffered with that evening. Mr. Day called. He came over with little Ralph and me after intermission. It was a game night. After I put Ralph to bed I joined Mr. Day on the piazza. Margaret, the maid, left the day previous. I gave her a $2 tip.

"Mr. Day and I sat on the piazza. We occupied both chairs that were near the corner. His chair was over a foot away from mine. We remained until about 12 o'clock.

"Some one turned on the porch light while we sat there. It was turned on from inside the house.

"When that light was turned I was not in any compromising position. I was not in Mr. Day's lap. I did not put my arms around him. Our conversations are not true. I was in my chair and Mr. Day was in his. I got up and turned on the light. Mr. Black's charge about my sitting in he same chair with Mr. Day is absolutely an untruth.

"Mr. Black did not flash any light. Mr. Day went away about 12 o'clock. There was no conducting or kissing.

"On Sunday, the 5th, I was still sick. Mr. Day did not visit me that night. I retired early with little Ralph.

"Monday, September sixth, Labor Day. I took a short walk with Mrs. Morse. I was on the Oceanside piazza most of the day.

"That night there was a dance. I danced most some. That night I did not make any signal to attract Mr. Day's attention.

MADE ONE SIGNAL.

"I did one night, however, make a signal to him. He started for the piazza, intending to find out why the men were. I signalled him to come back, as I did not think it advisable. I put the boy to bed early Labor Day night.

"I joined Mr. Day on the west porch. We went there because little Ralph requested it. He wanted me to be within calling distance.

"I went ahead of Mr. Day. I passed through the room with the French windows. Mr. Day followed me. I did not pull down any shade. We went immediately to the piazza.

"I was never on the front part of that room in my life. I didn't even step in that room.

"When we arrived on the porch we sat in rocking chairs. While we sat there little Ralph, who, after he had went through, went upstairs, attended to Ralph and returned.

"Mr. Day did not enter the house with me. Mr. Day walked around considerably smoking. He is quite a nervous man. There is no electric light on this piazza.

"While we were there one of the maids came in an entrance underneath the piazza and told some gentleman friend good night. We left then.

TELLS OF KIDNAPING.

"We came directly through to the other end of the house. I closed no doors and touched no lights.

"Tuesday, September 7, Mr. Day had made some little toys for Ralph. During the day the toys got mixed up. Little Ralph had asked Mr. Day to come over and fix them. Mr. Day said that he would. They were sort of little parachutes. They would fly.

"I was on a rear porch watching the little boys play on the rocks in the rear of our cottage. Mr. Day joined me that evening in the hotel lobby. I did not see him again until after little Ralph was taken.

"When little Ralph was taken I was hysterical. We had dined. Ralph and I had started for the cabins. I had him by the hand. I started to cross the street. Suddenly I had thought of something. I sent Ralph back to get it.

"It was then they took little Ralph. He screamed. He said: 'Save me, Maddy, save me, Maddy.' I had told him to scream if any one ever attempted to take him. They threw a coat over his head."

During her recital of this scene Mrs. Carpenter broke down. She continued with difficulty, however. She sobbed for several minutes. Continuing, she said:

"I followed them in Mr. Lancaster's car. We went as far as Salem, N. H. We lost sight of them.

"We came to the house and returned to the house. I went to Mrs. Morse's room. I then telephoned to Mr. Dixon. The police were also notified.

QUESTIONED BY JUDGE.

"I thought I recognized my husband in the party which took my boy. I was not sure. I went back to bed. I haven't heard a word from him. I haven't had a telephone call from him.

"My husband no intimate relation with another woman. I have never seen him with another woman.

"When that man turned I was not in any compromising position. I was not in Mr. Day's lap. I did not put my arms around him. Our conversations are not true. I was in my chair and Mr. Day was in his. I got up and turned on the light. Mr. Black's charge about my sitting in the

EXPECT SENATE TO CONFIRM BRANDEIS

Washington, May 22.—When the Judiciary Committee of the Senate meets tomorrow to vote on the nomination of Louis D. Brandeis to the Supreme Court, a favorable report will probably be ordered. Senator Shields is the only Democrat standing out, and it is reported that he will not return to Washington before the committee acts.

The vote, therefore, is expected to be 9 to 8 in favor of confirmation of Mr. Brandeis.

Chairman Culberson made public the text of a letter from Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, indorsing the nomination of Mr. Brandeis and declaring his belief that his rejection by the Senate "would be a grave mistake for the whole legal profession, the court, all American business and the country."

A change of sentiment is indicated in the Senate toward both Mr. Brandeis and George Rubiee of New Hampshire, nominated to be a member of the Federal Trade Commission and recently rejected by the Senate. A motion to reconsider the vote by which Rubiee was rejected is pending.

Chairman Joseph E. Davies and Commissioners Edward N. Hurley and William J. Harris of the Trade Commission had a conference with Secretary Tumulty at the White House. After the conference Mr. Davies said he felt certain Mr. Rubiee's nomination would be confirmed.

It is understood administration officials have made a careful canvass of the situation and base their hope on the result. Senator Hollis made public a letter strongly indorsing the work of Mr. Rubiee as a member of the commission, written by Mr. Davies.

GOVERNOR VETOES STATE ASYLUM BILL

Governor McCall today vetoed the bill extending beyond January 1, 1917, the time for abandonment of the Worcester State Asylum in Worcester and the transfer of the patients to the Grafton colony. Under the acts of 1912, the time for removal of the patients was placed at January 1, 1917, and the State was permitted to issue $100,000 of bonds for extensive alterations at Grafton. The Governor says he fears the bill passed by the present Legislature would impair the bonds.

FIND MAN KILLED BY LEATHER BELT

Danbury, Ct., May 23.—The body of a well-dressed man, evidently strangled to death by a man's leather belt, was found beside the railroad tracks under the Sodom reservoir road bridge today. The police believe the body was hurled from an automobile from the bridge above the railroad tracks.

REVEAL BIG WAR PLAN TO GUARD PANAMA CANAL

By International News Service.

Washington, May 22.—Details of the gigantic scheme for protection of the Panama Canal, which includes the acquisition of about four times the territory now comprising the Canal Zone, became known here today.

In pursuance of this scheme, which has been made necessary, in the opinion of military experts, by the fact that towns have been successfully bombarded in Europe from distances of more than twenty miles, a triangle of land at the Atlantic end of the canal, embracing several thousand acres, already has been taken over from the Panama government.

The confidential report of a special defence committee made up of officers from several branches of the army, acting with a naval officer, has convinced the military authorities of the necessity of acquiring and defending a strip of land thirty or forty miles wide, with the canal in the centre, instead of the present ten-mile strip.

NEEDED LEGISLATION.

The defence committee has suggested legislation which will make possible:

1—The exclusion of foreigners from territory certain to be the theatre of operation in case of war, and where it is proposed to erect defensive works.

2—Freedom to the authorities of the Canal Zone in time of peace to take all measures for the protection of the canal, including extensive reconnaissance and surveys, construction of roads and trails (communications), installation of lines of information, selection and preparation of defensive positions.

3—To facilitate the development of improved coast artillery land defence projects.

4—To provide unrestricted areas for troop manoeuvres and the removal of reservoirs of infection in native villages from the proposed zone.

5—To insure the secrecy of every defensive measure taken to oppose a hostile landing or advance, with the destruction of the Panama Canal as its object.

ACQUIRE MORE LAND.

A large number of military and naval officials are now in field making the surveys preliminary to taking this territory. Under the terms of the treaty with Panama the United States can take title to any land the American military authorities deem necessary for the protection of the canal in return the United States has guaranteed the sovereignty of Panama. There are few private owners in the contemplated acquisition.

In addition to the acquiring of several times the amount of land originally take from Panama for the Canal Zone the huge, defensive scheme takes in the acquisition of Taboga Island, at the Pacific end. This will be done in order that an American fleet coming out of the canal in line could have an opportunity to form in battle line, while the guns in the island held an opposing fleet out of range. This island is a Panama possession and will be acquired on the plea of the necessity as a means of defence.

30,000 MEXICANS COMING TO BORDER

By International News Service.

Washington, May 22.—Official advices to the State Department today said that instead of 10,000 Carranzista soldiers being sent to the northeastern part of Mexico near the Big Bend district, General Trevino is to have a force of 30,000. The additional 20,000 men are reported to be moving toward that section. Why there has been a change in the number was not revealed.

Officials here looked upon the report with undisguised uneasiness. They were without warning that suhc an increase in the force was contemplated.

M'CALL URGES COMMISSION ON "L" FINANCES

The appointment of a special commission to investigate the financial straits of the Boston Elevated was recommended by Governor McCall in a special message to the Legislature today.

With the message, Governor McCall submitted a copy of a letter sent to him by the Elevated in which the big transportation corporation complains that it cannot raise sufficient money to equip the tunnels, subways and rapid transit lines now in the process of construction unless it is given financial relief by the State.

An increase of fare might have relieved it from its financial embarrassments, the Elevated says, but the Public Service Commission, after a recent investigation of the situation, decided against any proposal for a fare increase.

The only other relief that is open, the Elevated said in its letter to the Governor, was for the State to absolve it from some of its contracts for subway extensions or to enlarge the State laws that now restrict the issuance of stocks and bonds.

Governor McCall recommends the formation of a special commission to investigate whether any action is necessary by the State to assist the Elevated to derive a sufficient return to enable it to fulfill its "corporate and public purposes."

The Governor recommends a special commission consisting of the present Public Service Commission, the Boston Transit Commission and five other members who doubtlessly would be appointed by the Governor in behalf of the state.

The message is considered to be the most important yet sent by the Governor to the Legislature, involving as it does one of the biggest public service corporations of the State widely affords transportation service for the most populous community in the State. The special commission would report its findings to the next Legislature.

Leland Athletes Arrive.

The athletic team of Leland Stanford, Jr., University are here for the championship meeting of the intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America, to be held in the Harvard Stadium Friday and Saturday.

COMMERCE BODY FOR PREPAREDNESS

At a meeting of the directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce today, a resolution was adopted expressing the sympathy of the Chamber for the preparedness movement and urging its members to participate in the parade. Because of the affiliation of its individual members with various groups which are to be represented in the parade, it is inexpedient for the chamber to march as a body.

SEEK BROTHER TO SAVE STOWAWAY

The Norwegian steamer Nurnega, in today from Christiania, brought here Lauri Laurila, sixteen, who stowed away in Christiania in the hope of joining his brother, who lived in Boston the last time the boy heard from him. The boy's parents died recently and he was having great difficulty in earning a living in Europe. If the brother can be found and is willing and able to look out for Lauri, he will be allowed to land. Otherwise he will be deported.

This Skin Peeler All the Rage in Society

There is a growing tendency among women of culture and fashion to pay more attention to hygienic means of preserving their charms. The advent of mercolized wax doubtless has been largely responsible for this. This remarkable substance produces complexions so natural in appearance, so magnetically beautiful, artificial complexions are no longer desired. Instead of "doctoring" an offensive skin, the skin is peeled off. The wax peels the skin so gradually, in such fine particles, no discomfort is experienced. The fresher, younger skin beneath, wholly in evidence within a week or two, is lily white, satiny soft and smooth. It's not a patched-over complexion, but a brand new one. That's why mercolized wax has become such a rage among society folk. The wax is put on nights like cold cream and washed off mornings. All druggists sell it; one ounce will do.

Another hygienic treatment now much in favor is one to remove wrinkles, made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Used as a wash lotion it "acts like magic."—Advertisement

BANDITS MOVE ON BORDER TOWN

By H. H. STANSBURY.

El Paso, Tex., May 23.—Another American citizen, unidentified, has been murdered in the Minaca mining district by Mexicans.

The body was located through the efforts of friends who were searching for Eldridge Booth. It was first reported the body was that of Booth, but he was located in El Paso.

The victim of the Mexicans had been shot in the back three times and the body was left by the assassins where it had fallen by the roadside near Minaca.

Mexican bandits were sighted today approaching Lobo, an important hamlet eight miles from the border. Texas rangers transmitted the news of the raid to Marathon and asked for help. There are regular American troopers patrolling the district near Lobo.

Additional troops probably will be sent by automobile from Valentine, which is north of Lobo. It is feared here that the bandits are bent on duplicating at Lobo the Glen Springs raid, in which a small American detachment was overwhelmed.

Insiders believed to be a part of the Mexican regulars recently sent into Chihuahu by General Pershing to guard the foreign-owned mining properties at Cuatro Cienegas. Everything of value that was movable was packed away into the country between San Pedro and Cuatro Cienegas, where the Mexicans are now hiding.

Funston Demands Larger Guard

San Antonio, Tex., May 22.—General Funston made ready today to order the second call for 5000 militiamen of Texas militia to the Brownsville district to patrol the Mexican border. This force is now part of the regular army.

Washington reports that Funston had recommended court-martial for 116 militiamen who refused to become part of the federal organization. It was denied by the general today. Funston declared he had merely asked Secretary of War Baker what to do with the 116 men, their State organization having been absorbed. The Big Bend district remains the trouble Funston. The Big Bend circle is 200 miles and there are not sufficient troops available to guard it effectively. For this reason Funston is anxious to get a reply to his request from Washington again more coast guards to the border.

'Health Is the First Wealth'

The rich man suffering from asthmatic or pulmonary trouble knows this even better than the poor man thus afflicted. Either may be able to obtain relief by using Piso's Cure. Alternative, a preparation containing cubeb, chlorid, wintergreen and twenty years has been giving wide-spread satisfaction in such cases.

Of course, no one should be seconded by rest, pure food and fresh air. For no medicine can be of much good where these provisions of Nature are not made use of. In numerous instances where they have not produced desired results, Piso's Cure alterative has furnished the missing link in the chain.

Ministers and Doctors to Join In Great Preparedness Parade

Private George L. Bowie of the Eighth Regiment, the sentinel and "information bureau" at parade headquarters. He is one of the buslers workers in aid of the coming preparedness demonstration.

Three of the telephone girls who are being kept busy at the Preparedness Parade Headquarters on Broad street these days. Left to right—Miss Anna Klivans, Miss Mary Flaherty and Miss Catherine Lenehan.

A big delegation of Boston ministers will appear in the Preparedness Parade on Saturday, it became known today.

Baptists, Episcopalians and Methodists are enrolling, and Unitarians and Universalists are expected to send a delegation before noon. The Rev. M. R. Deuing is enrolling the Baptists, in his rooms at Treasury Temple. A splitting of the division of the ministers to parade, he said:

"We believe in defending our country in the event of an invasion. We are not belligerent. We believe in peace, but we believe in preparedness, too. Help us will see the ministers of Boston in the Preparedness Parade on Saturday."

SARGENT SCHOOL IN LINE.

That the Sargent school will be represented by a delegation of 200 young women became known today. The Sargent school enrollment was the first received when Captain Frederick A. Woods, formerly adjutant in the Coast Artillery Corps, M. V. M., took up his headquarters at the office of the Special Aid Society for American Preparedness, No. 541 Boylston street, to enroll women organizations.

The Sargent school was closely followed by the Auxiliary of the United Spanish War Veterans of Charlestown, which will have 100 marchers.

Congressman Ernest W. Roberts has informed the committee that he will march with the other Congressmen from Massachusetts.

Colonel Charles H. Sherrill, who was chief marshal of the New York preparedness parade, has been invited to review the Boston demonstration.

Secretary of War Baker will be unable to come to Boston for the parade.

Mayor Curley, James M. Curley, Jr., Lieutenant-Colonel John H. Dunn, Major William J. Casey and Captain Frederick E. Bolton, R. E. de Normandie was appointed orderly.

CALL TO DOCTORS.

Lincoln Clifford Cummings, chairman of the Massachusetts committee of the Navy League of the United States and honorary vice-president of the league, is making arrangements for the members of the organization to appear in the parade. He wants them to communicate with him at No. 56 Dragon street, Brookline.

Battalion Sergeant-Major J. J. Barter, Eighth Regiment, M. V. M.; Major Harry D. Campbell, Eighth Regiment, M. V. M., and Lieutenant W. H. McEwen, Naval Battalion, today joined the headquarters staff to assist Chief Marshal Buck and Major Keville in arranging the detail organization of the parade.

A division of medical men is being organized under the auspices of the Massachusetts Medical Society. The society wants every doctor in the State who can possibly do so to turn out for the parade, whether he is a member of that society or not. The society is merely acting, unofficially, as an organizing centre, and Dr. David Cheever, who is acting as secretary of the committee in charge, wants every doctor who will march to communicate immediately with him at No. 235 Beacon street. Boston, by post card, so he can estimate the probable number of marchers and file an enrollment blank before Wednesday at 5 p. m.

Students of the Harvard and Tufts medical schools and probably of Boston University will march as units in the medical division, and there will be a band for the whole division.

PHYSICIANS' COMMITTEE.

Among the doctors on the committee of arrangements are Dr. Charles F. Withington, president, and Dr. Walter Burrage, secretary of the Massachusetts Medical Society; Dr. Cheever of the Homeopathic Hospital; Dr. Harvey Cushing of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital; Dr. Paul Thorndike, Dr. James S. Stone of the Children's Hospital, Dr. Franklin Balch of the Massachusetts General Hospital and Dr. John Bottomley of the Carney Hospital.

Sergeant Edward J. Hurtig of the Eighth Infantry Band, has been detailed as musician on the staff of Chief Marshal Buck.

Three young women are playing a prominent, but modest, part in the preliminaries to the parade. They are stenographers, and they will not even march. They are members of the committees, nor will their names appear on the honor scroll with those who are promoting what promises to be the greatest pageant of patriotism ever held in New England.

These girls are just secluded units, toiling daily behind the scenes at parade headquarters, No. 42 Broad street, but the size and success of Saturday's demonstration depends, in no small measure, on the mass of mail and telegraphic orders and instructions churned out on their typewriters.

They are Miss Mary Flaherty, Miss Anna Klivans and Miss Catherine Lenehan. Another attache who has shouldered many or the burdens and who has looked after much information thrust in addition to his assignments as headquarters' sentinel, is Private George L. Bowie of the Eighth Regiment.

PREPAREDNESS ADVOCATED BY UNITARIANS

Preparedness was advocated and neutrality demanded at the ninety-first annual meeting of the American Unitarian Association in Tremont Temple today.

President Samuel A. Eliot said in the course of his address: "We have been told that war is hell. We have lived to find how true this was by seeing of that noted general of a generation ago. Now we know that war is hell, when all its glamour has been stripped off, and there is left the pink of the young men in the trenches who are today crying out against it.

"But in the midst of it, neutrality cannot be admired. We have to take sides. When we try to be on both sides we find out after a time that we have been on the wrong side."

The Rev. Edward Savary advocated preparedness in these words: "The exigencies of the times demand adequate preparedness."

Rev. Dr. F. Dole made a plea against military force.

The name of the Rev. William L. Sullivan of All Souls' Church, New York, was presented as minister-at-large for Unitarian churches in America. In his address upon taking evangelism he advocated a new religion and a new basis for it.

"The religion of America must no longer be Asiatic," he said. "The religion of America must be created within itself. Liberal evangelism is here. Democracy in this country must not have a borrowed religion from the East, an alien religion."

Dr. Crothers of Cambridge quoted a letter from his son, who is in France in the ambulance corps. "I am so happy to be able to do a man's size Job," said this letter.

"We ought to give every minister that sort of a job," said Dr. Crothers. "Let him feel his independence of Mrs. So-and-So, who is worrying him about the kind of sermons he should preach."

The Folly Of Taking Digestive Pills

A Warning to Dyspeptics.

The habit of taking digestive aids after meals makes chronic dyspeptics of many thousands of men and women because artificial digestants and medicinal cures are fascinating and influence the excessive and condition of the stomach which is the cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The after dinner pill merely lessens the sensitiveness of the stomach nerves and thus gives a false sense of freedom from pain, but the organs are subject to inflammation, etc. Sufferers, including diabetics, etc., after taking a dose of pape's diapepsin realize that it is unnecessary to rely upon the stomach for digestion of food, but that it is the duty of the stomach to digest the food and that the use of diapepsin simply helps the stomach to do its work without hindrance.

Pape's diapepsin is the most certain, quickest and harmless stomach regulator and indigestion corrector in the world, and besides relieving sour stomach, gas, belching, heartburn, etc., after eating, it digests food in the stomach in spite of anything you may eat. Large fifty-cent case at any drug store in the world. Millions of people know it should be in every home where there is a dyspeptic.

WOMEN READY TO FACE JURY AT WAITE TRIAL

stomach and viscera of Peck, as those from which he made the chemical analysis. He then went into a technical explanation on how the analysis was made.

Among those in the courtroom were Warren W. Waite and Frank Waite, father and brother of the prisoner, and Miss Catherine Peck, sister of the murdered man, and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Peck.

Dr. Vaughn testified that after a complete test he had found arsenic in Peck's stomach. He then produced a bottle of pinkish liquid, which he said he had received from Dr. Schaffer, medical expert for District Attorney Swann, for analysis. This is supposed to be some of the embalming fluid used to preserve Peck's body for burial. Dr. Vaughn stated he found no arsenic in this liquid.

YOUNG PECK GLARES HATE.

Percy S. Peck, son of the murdered man, sat far across the room, dividing his gaze between Waite and Justice Sheam. There was something pitiful and sad about Percy Peck as while he stared at the justice. But his sad features changed into a hot hatred when he glared at the sardonic prisoner, whose mien changed to sullen and awed contrition.

Coldly, dispassionately and expressionless, District Attorney Swann told the jury why this man was being tried for his life. Without a trace of emotion, without a breath of heat, without a note of scorn, the chief prosecutor snapped forth a chronological schedule of dates and events that he called the framework of the case the State would construct.

Meanwhile Waite sat silent and unperturbed. Once his shoulders drooped, his head nodded forward, the little wrinkles of a lurking mirth fled the corners of his eyes and the contemptuous sneer deserted his mouth. The cold, blue eyes closed drowsily. For a brief time he seemed to be asleep.

WAITE'S SNEER UPSETS PECK.

One of the most dramatic incidents of the day—a silent drama, but one fiercely dramatic—was the failure of Percy Peck to control himself while in sight of the sneer on Waite's face. All during the morning, Percy Peck sat where he could see the face of the latter's alleged murderer.

Mrs. Percy Peck at that time sat beside him. Tears were in her eyes, but upon occasion she unbuttoned shoulders. Every time Percy Peck let his eyes rest upon that sneer his face hardened and he leaned forward to vault the intervening benches and pounce upon the young man.

Mrs. Peck noticed this. She kept breaking the spell by pulling her husband toward her. Finally, when District Attorney Swann was sketching the case of the prosecution, Waite's expression became utterly contemptuous.

Young Peck saw it and he became crimson. His shoulders twitched. He clenched his hands together until they whitened. He shifted so that the face at the bar could not facetake him. But twice he turned with hypnotic about the sneer. He had to look again.

WOMAN TESTIFIES.

Very quietly, Mrs. Peck arose, plucked her husband's sleeve and bade him follow. She led him to a chair where he could see nothing but the shoulders and head of Waite. The menace was gone. Percy Peck slumped down in his seat and relaxed.

Dr. Moore's testimony was almost perfunctory. He told of visits to the Waite apartments to attend the aged grandmother on March 2, 3, 5 and 11. Finally he told of Waite calling at 12:30 on the morning of May 12.

On his visits to Mr. Peck, the doctor said he had found the old man's heart and general condition quite good. He declared that when Waite called him up on the morning of March 12—the day Mr. Peck died—he told Waite to "dose himself as he was both to believe that the old man was dying.

"I told Waite to go back to his father-in-law and feel again for his pulse," declared the doctor. "He returned to the telephone and told me that there was no pulse. I arrived at the Waite apartment at 1:45. Mr. Peck was dead. I signed the death certificate on the information that Waite gave me.

"I cannot recall whether it was Dr. Waite or Mrs. Waite, but one of them brought up the question of cremation. Waite declared that it was his father-in-law's wish that he be cremated. I have never had an arsenical poisoning case, but I would have known the symptoms had I found for them.

"On March 22, Waite, after returning to New York from Grand Rapids, called my attention to the newspapers, in which suspicion was pointed at him. He asked me what to do. I told him to have an autopsy performed at once and clear himself.

"Once, I do recall, he told me that his father-in-law was much worried about the death of his wife and might not survive the shock if he were taken ill. He declared also that Mrs. Waite was overcome by the death of her mother and that if she became ill she might die because of the condition of her nerves.

"After the death of Mr. Peck, the day he was asked to sign a permit I would show in a body if arsenic had been used in the embalming fluid, I told him it would.

ROBERT NEILL, mechanical engineer.

PORTER HEBEL, cheese dealer.

THADDEUS S. BARLOW, superintendent Consolidated Gas, Co.

CAMBRIDGE DOCTOR FACES DRUG CHARGE

Dr. James E. Stevens of Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, Charles Melver of Prospect street, Cambridge, and Miss Ethel Forberg of Bennington street, East Boston, were before Judge Almy in the Cambridge District Court today, following a drug crusade by Sergeant Thomas Dore and Patrolman Fred Collins of Station No. 2, Cambridge. Dr. Stevens was charged with prescribing morphine for three habitual users of the drug. Melver and Miss Forberg were charged with having morphine in their possession.

Dr. Stevens pleaded not guilty. Melver and Miss Forberg pleaded guilty. The case of Dr. Stevens will be tried tomorrow Monday. The lumber is believed to be a part of the deck load of the schooner Elma, which was damaged by the storm last week. It is valued at $350.

'Studio Mate' Is Anxious That Justice Be Done in the Trial of Dr. Waite

By MARGARET HORTON,
The Woman of Mystery in the Waite Case and Dr. Waite's Studio Companion.

New York, May 22.—It is very hard for me to think that I can write, now that the trial has started.

I realize that this is going to be the most momentous week of my life. A year ago today I was packing up to go away to Montana to see my sister. Tousy I am a central figure in this terrible trial.

In New York cruel things have been said about me during the last few weeks. And many more I realize will be said during the coming week.

But I bear nobody with bad feeling made to suffer by the actions of Dr. Waite any ill will.

WILL BE GLAD TO FLEE CITY WHEN ABLE

I am glad that the trial has started. It seems a very long time since my name was first mentioned in connection with this case. I want to see the trial all over. I want to go away from New York. I want to go to the country and live the life of a farmer's daughter.

Perhaps some day, when the world will have forgotten all about my life in the studio, I may return to New York and continue my musical studies. At the moment my one great desire is to get away from here—get away from a city where I sometimes feel that everybody is staring at me.

I was glad to see that the jury was picked quickly. I was so afraid that several days would be taken in selecting the jurymen, and this suspense is awful.

WANTS TO SEE THAT JUSTICE IS DONE

I want my ordeal over. I know that it is going to be an unpleasant one, but I am prepared to go through bravely with it to see that justice is done.

I was unwillingly made a prominent figure in this case. I have acted thoughtlessly and stupidly, and my lack of discretion has brought much misery to those who are nearest and dearest to me. My great mistakes have now been made clear to me by friends, who are really friends, and I am ready and willing to tell the truth before the court that justice may be done.

NOW REALIZES HER FOLLY OF THE PAST.

It is only now, on the eve of my being called as a witness, that I fully realize the awful position in which, ignorant and thoughtlessness led me.

All my life I have been impulsive. My friends used often to tease me by saying that I was absent-minded. One of my first tricks was to give a beggar my last shilling, sometimes a sovereign and then have to walk two or three miles home.

Perhaps the succession of shocks that this unpleasant notoriety has given me will give me more sense; make me, in the future, think before I act.

GIRL MISSING, MAN IS HELD AFTER NOTE

Miss Hazel Aylsworth, the East Weymouth choir singer who, according to the police, was enticed into leaving home by Myron Clark, a married man of Boston, is not to blame in the opinion of her mother.

Mrs. Walter Herman, the girl's mother, said today:

"Hazel is not to blame at all. It is all the fault of that man."

Clark was held in $1,000 by Judge Avery of Quincy District Court for additional hearing on June 1. He pleaded not guilty to the enticement charge.

Miss Aylsworth is still missing. Police Chief Pratt of Weymouth said today that no definite trace of her had been obtained.

Clark has a wife and two children. Chief Pratt received a letter from Paris, Ill., which Clark is alleged to have sent to Miss Aylsworth in care of her married sister, who lives in Paris. It is said that in this letter Miss Aylsworth was asked to wait until July, when the writer would come out there and marry her. Miss Aylsworth's sister opened the letter by mistake and wired the Weymouth police.

WILL SIFT MISHAP TO SAN FRANCISCO

Portsmouth, N. H., May 23.—The Navy Department has appointed a board of inquiry which will sit on the grounding of the mine depot ship San Francisco on Great Round Shoals, Nantucket Sound. The board consists of Captain Henry C. Wiley, president, U. S. S. New Jersey; Captain Richard H. Jackson, U. S. S. Virginia, and Commander Roger E. Williams, navigating officer of the New Jersey, as judge advocate.

M'CALL INSISTS SCHOOLS BE MADE SAFE

A vigorous demand for legislation that will safeguard the lives of children from fire in the public schools of Massachusetts was served upon the State Legislature today by Governor McCall.

Governor McCall, in a special message read this afternoon in the House, calls upon the Legislature not to dismiss until it has passed legislation:

1—To give the Building Inspection Department of the State Police power to require the construction of "fire stops" in all school buildings.

2—To allow the State police to order alterations in all existing buildings.

3—To allow the State police to order the installation of sprinklers in all school buildings.

4—To increase the inspection force of the State police, if necessary, to secure adequate inspection.

"I have fresh in mind the disastrous fire at St. John's Parochial School, Peabody, on October 25 of last year," the Governor said, "and it seems to me that the General Court should not adjourn without passing suitable legislation to prevent as far as reasonably possible the recurrence of a similar tragedy."

The Governor's recommendations are substantially in accord with the object of the crusade brought by the AMERICAN last Summer.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, but railroads remained the strongest group. Coppers had eased off. Most price changes were small, but a number of issues showed good gains. Taking the list as a whole, advances exceeded declines. Mexican Petroleum was a second hour feature, being strong and active. American Smelting advanced more than two points. Industrial Alcohol recovered and made a good gain.

Gains at 12 o'clock included American Smelting 2¾, Chandler Motor 2¾, Mexican Petroleum 2⅜, Industrial Alcohol 1, Atchison 1, Baltimore & Ohio 1⅛, Canadian Pacific ¾, Chesapeake & Ohio ⅝, Erie 1st pref ¼, Reading ⅝, Southern Pacific ⅜, St. Paul ⅜, Union Pacific 1¼, U. S. Steel ⅜, Maxwell ⅝, Goodrich ⅝, and Beet Sugar ¼.

Among declines were Anaconda ⅛, Butte & Superior ⅜, Kennecott ⅜, American Zinc ⅛, Inspiration ⅛, Utah Copper ¼, Car and Foundry ¼, American Can ⅜, Republic Steel ⅝, American Locomotive ⅛, General Electric ⅛, Colorado Fuel ¼, Crucible ⅝, Distillers 1, Westinghouse ⅜, Great Northern ⅛, Central Leather ¼, New Haven ⅝, Northern Pacific ⅛, and Southern Railway ⅛.

The Boston market remained quiet and gains at noon included Atlantic Coast Line ½, Preferred ½, Maine Central ¼, Boston & Maine ½, Copper Range ¼, North Butte ¼, U. S. Smelting 1 and Winona ½.

Among declines were Alumek 1, American Woolen ¼, Central Mass. 1, American Zinc ⅝, Old Dominion ½, Butte & Superior ⅛, New Haven ⅝ and United Fruit 1. The United Shoe was unchanged.

At the opening in New York prices ruled slightly higher, but price changes were small and without significance. Railroads were the most active issue. Reading, Baltimore & Ohio 1¼, and Southern Pacific ¼, each 100 shares or more. Mexican Petroleum was a prominent copper. Munition issues were irregular. Early trading was of a fair volume. There was no alteration over night in market essentials. Within a few minutes the tape became irregular and was so at the end of the first hour.

Trading was chiefly by the professional element. The public is not speculating to any extent as yet, but a great deal of money is being invested in small lots for investment holdings. It is preferred by Elite so-called big interests would be in a position with many big speculative movement with politics so unsettled, seems to ascertain and the labor outlook coming on so much unrest.

The Anaconda was narrow and dull on the stock with Utah, Southern Copper Range and Mexican among the most active issues. There was a firm undertone to the copper market, but it was devoid of interesting features during the first few minutes. Fluctuations were narrow.

In London spot copper and futures were off 1/, with electrolytic unchanged. Spot tin and futures declined £3 and Straits £3 15s. Spot lead was 2s 6d and futures 1s 3d. Spelter quotations were unchanged.

HUGHES HIGHEST IN OFFICIAL COUNT

Montpelier, Vt., May 23.—The Board of Canvassers today gave out the official returns of the primary held May 16, giving Hughes 5,180, Wilson 2,731; Roosevelt 1,521, Progressives 1,419. Republican total 13,830, McCall 131, Frost 159, Ford 24, Weeks 28, Champ Clark 29.

T. R. TESTIFIES FOR RIGGS AT BANK TRIAL

By International News Service.

Washington, May 23.—Former President Theodore Roosevelt today appeared in the criminal court of the District of Columbia and testified to the highest terms regarding the personal character of Charles C. Glover, president of the Riggs National Bank of Washington.

Glover, with fellow officials of the bank, has been on trial for nearly a fortnight charged with perjury in making up returns for the bank. Charges were brought by officials of the Treasury Department.

The testimony of Colonel Roosevelt was utterly devoid of sensation, being subjected to cross-examination.

In very few words to pay tribute to the probity of Mr. Glover and to stated that he was the best type of an American citizen, Theodore Roosevelt concluding his testimony. Colonel Roosevelt returned to New York.

Although the appearance of the Colonel on the stand was the "high tide" for the defence of the Riggs bank officials, the testimony of Henry Mitchell Former Ambassador to Germany Henry D. Wolf and Colonel United States Senator Oscar B. Underwood also declared that Mr. Glover was "without reproach."

BIG GREETING TO COLONEL.

Charles D. Walcott, director of the Smithsonian Institute, concurred in this testimony, and also declared that William H. Taft, with many of the indicted officials, was of excellent character.

A big crowd surrounded the courthouse and cheered Colonel Roosevelt as he entered the building. But his warm reception on arrival was only a drop in the bucket to the enthusiastic applause and cheers which marked his exit. Fully one thousand people pushed out of the court to the automobile of his daughter, Mrs. Longworth, and fought with each other in an effort to shake his hand. The Colonel beamed on them all and shook hands with those nearest him.

During his entire stay in Washington the colonel did not talk politics with anyone other than Representative Longworth. He had positively refused to run for any appointment with political friends.

Inasmuch as his testimony in court occupied only a few minutes, the colonel went for an auto ride through Potomac Park for a while before leaving for New York. As a result he narrowly missed his train, being held up at the gate by a station guard who demanded his ticket.

DIDN'T KNOW T. R.

The guard did not recognize the colonel in citizen's clothes, and refused to let him through until the station master, who knew the colonel and had witnessed what was going on, arrived at a run and ordered him given the immediate right of way.

The incident caused a smile, which the colonel joined in as soon as he was safely on board of the train.

Every effort made to get the colonel to announce his position was sidetracked by him.

"I am very glad to see you again," was his invariable salutation to old friends. Major Loeffler, who was chief doorkeeper at the White House for many years, and who retired on a pension during the Taft administration, was received at the Longworth residence, and Colonel Roosevelt and he had a fine time "chewing the rag," as the major expressed it.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

The bill aimed to punish drunken auto drivers by arbitrarily suspending their licenses for at least one year was reported in a third reading in the House of Representatives today without opposition. The bill previously passed the Senate.

* * *

Legislation to permit the new town of Millville, which formerly was a part of Blackstone, to organize and do business was admitted by the Rules Committee today for consideration by the Legislature. Governor McCall vetoed the original bill for its failure to contain these provisions, but the bill was passed over his veto.

* * *

Today was Governor McCall's busy day. He sent to the Legislature one veto and three special messages.

* * *

Legislative leaders had set the scenes for adjournment this week, but Governor McCall's messages on the Boston Elevated and the need for protection against fire in the public schools may cause session to run into next week.

* * *

The House of Representatives passed the Springfield charter bill. At the state election, under this bill, Springfield will elect only two new charters and at the city election will put the winner against the present charter.

ENGINEERS IN CLASH BEFORE STATE BOARD

A split among the stationary engineers in Massachusetts was revealed at a hearing today before the special committee on commissions on a petition introduced in the eleventh hour to abolish the State board of boiler rules and the office of deputy chief of the boiler-inspection department and to place the head of that department under civil service at a salary of $3,000.

Arthur M. Rimbell, H. M. Connerford and William J. Hicks, speaking for the Massachusetts State Branch of Engineers, favored the bill on the ground that they believe that the present board of boiler rules had outlived its usefulness and that the bill provided for the appointment of a temporary board by the Governor whereby it is made necessary.

J. A. Nash, legislative agent of Local No. 16 of the engineers; Jonathan Perry, George E. Cushing and Gerald Bitzer and P. J. Sheehan, also representing engineers' and firemen's unions in Boston and other parts of Massachusetts, claimed the measure was introduced by Deputy Chief Inspector Linck, deputy chief of the boiler inspection department in the district police. They said a similar measure had been given "leave to withdraw" by the legislative committee on Mercantile Affairs earlier in this session.

The fight over the boiler inspection department bill was heated, the hearing was interrupted for a time because of the between the factions as to how many engineers each represented.

CHARGE IRISH PLOT REVEALED TO U. S.

Berlin, via London, May 23.—As the result of an article in the Continental Times, a newspaper published in Berlin in English, S. Seymour B. Conger, correspondent here of the Associated Press, has brought a libel action against Colonel Edwin A. Emerson, another American correspondent living here. Emerson charged that Ambassador Gerard and Conger had something to do with the capture of Sir Roger Casement. In the article it is intimated that Mr. Conger told Mr. Gerard of the plans of Casement, and the Ambassador cabled them to Washington, from which place they were communicated to the British.

Mr. Conger denies that he had any knowledge of Casement's plans and heard of the Irish trouble until two days after its inception.

GIVEN 3 MONTHS FOR NON-SUPPORT

Patrick Brennan was arraigned in the South Boston Court today, charged with drunkenness and non-support of his wife and minor child. He was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. The drunkenness charge was filed.

"How much money has your husband given you for your support during the last three months?" asked Judge Day. "Fifty cents a week, your Honor," replied Mrs. Brennan, "the saloons get the rest of his money."

SEEK LICENSE BY APPEAL TO COURT

The petition of the Mandarin Company against the Boston Licensing Board for a writ of mandamus to compel the commissioners to grant a victualler's license to them in their building on Tremont street, has been continued by Judge DeCourcy of the Supreme Court until June 2. The company claims the board refused to grant the license because two of the new officers of the corporation were Chinemen.

REAFFIRM CYMRIC WAS TORPEDOED

London, May 23.—The Admiralty has denied reports from Amsterdam that the crew of the Cymric, on their arrival in London, had stated that the vessel we sunka by an explosion of her boilers. "The Cymric was torpedoed without any warning whatever," says the statement.

AT THE THEATRES

NURSERYLAND DELIGHTS AT KEITH'S

KEITH'S THEATRE—Bert Kalmar and Jessie Brown, billed as America's own representative dancers, direct from London, head the bill. They have a beautiful scenic production entitled "Nurseryland."

All the old familiar characters, so dear to the hearts of children and grown-ups, appear upon the stage, appropriately grouping fully around Mother Goose. There are Old Mother Hubbard, Simple Simon, Contrary Mary, Little Bo Peep, Jack and Jill and Little Boy Blue.

The impersonations are cleverly done by the two dancers. Their performance is as delightful to the old folks as to the children.

Ben Welch, aptly called the Warfield of vaudeville, was given a warm welcome. He presented his original character, which has been imitated so much, but never equalled.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Crane presented their newest vehicle, an uproariously funny comedy sketch, "Neighbors," by Donald and Peggy Wenrich. The comedienne and the composer who wrote the "Love Nest" and "Perfect Rose" presented a repertoire of delightful songs.

Other acts included Beatrice Morrelle's sextette of grand opera singers in costume; equestrienne feats by DeeVall, and her trained horses and dogs; Mullen and Coogan, "Just Like Pat"; Ollie Young and Alfred, rag bubble jugglers, and Mullen and Rogers, comedy skit.

BOSTON THEATRE—The Greek god of the screen, Francis X. Bushman, supported by beautiful Beverly Bayne, makes his debut in Boston in his latest picture, "A Million a Minute." Take deals with the will of an eccentric millionaire, who leaves his fortune to a certain young man and woman whom he fancies, in case they wed before a certain date. The girl he already married, and the despicable French count, and the man is a diamond miner in the wilds of Africa. How the two finally meet, fall in love, and after apparently insuperable difficulties are married just before the time limit expires makes a fascinating story.

Second only to the Bushman picture is the appearance of Nat Npson the Great and Sally, his mate, in their newest comedy, "Nat Nazzer, Detective." The concert vaudeville portion of the entertainment is exceptionally strong. Lillian Wiehl, Mealy and Montrose in a funny baseball travesty, Helen Trevel, a charming young lady violinist; Cedie Trio, remarkable acrobats, in vaudeville's versatilities; Bernard and Myers, in a lively singing and talking act, and a new tableaux vevant, posed by Miss Minnie Allen and known by Winifred Coyle and Rose Leverett.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE—The R. A. A. minstrels on Wednesday evening will reveal not only the talent of the 250 members of the organization who take part, but also will show their ingenuity in planning stage novelties. The first note will include a number of surprises. Of interest will be those in the moving pictures of R. A. A. activities, including the Outside, as many familiar faces will be shown. Another big feature will be a travesty, "On Board the Peace Ship Pleasure."

WILBUR THEATRE—A Brazilian Honeymoon entered its second week with a new feature added to the third act. Colleen Webb of Winchester Garden fame introduced "A Dance Brazilliene" into the picturesque Brazilian setting. Appearing with him was Miss Jeanne Carter, who two years ago danced at the Century Theatre in the "Passing Show" and opened up the first act. The comedians Ray Cloyd, Jack Lewis and Louis A. Normoll introduced many original lines and jazzy, pleasing situations.

WALDRON'S CASINO—The Summer Girl Burlesquers will be the attractions by Manager Waldron's own Bostonians, headed by the popular comedian, Frank Finney. This company will serve as the basis of the stock company for the season. Finney's Rondrons and his cast has been greatly added to by the choice of many favorites and by the addition of an especially selected chorus. Finney appears in "Jingle Jangle," a burlesque on "Jingle Jangle," a depot tangle, he appears in the information man. The blackface; he has a strong comedy role in the burlesque called "Making Movies." The wife of Finney's first impersonation in the political satire called "Bringing Home the Bacon." "Isle of Nowhere," a Chinese fantasie, he is seen in copper and talks "Chinese." Finney is a fast and breakneck speed and proves Finney's capacity and versatility.

COLONIAL THEATRE—The giant Ile Clune film of Helen Hunt Jackson's love story, "Ramona," has caught Boston's literary and artistic side with a firm grip, for this splendid picture was secured to open throng the Colonial Theatre since the first presentation last Wednesday night. There are so many novelties connected with this picture that it becomes a perfect dramatic and musical entertainment, besides being an exposition of the highest type of motion picture achievement.

TREMONT TEMPLE — Beginning Monday, May 29, the first exhibition in the United States of the official films of the Canadian and British Red Cross for the benefit of the sick and wounded in the war. They are real war pictures, taken at scenes of action at first line defenses. Sergeant Fred Wells, the hero of the battle of Ypres, will come with the picture and give his experience in the war.

POP CONCERTS—The program today will be devoted almost entirely to French music of the lighter class. Arthur Brooke, one of the flutists of the orchestra, will be the soloist. The program is as follows: Marche Joyeuse, Chabrier; overture, "Phedre," Massenet; intermezzo, "Naila," Delibes; selection, "Samson and Delilah," Saint-Saens; overture, "Mignon," Thomas; flute solos, Godard; "Reverie," Vieuxtemps; music from "Carmen," Bizet; Polonaise, Chopin; "The Only Girl," Herbert; "Valse des Blondes, Ganne; American Fantasy, Herbert.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—Victor Herbert's tuneful and melodious comic opera, "Frances Pat," added another week to its score last night. The show has drawn such remarkable business for the month of May, that is still going.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—This is the third and last week of "Our Mrs. McChesney," in which Ethel Barrymore is appearing. The Hobart comedy has caught on very remarkably in Boston, and Miss Barrymore has been asked to extend her engagement, but she has said a final word and has decided to close next Saturday night.

MAJESTIC THEATRE—"The Birth of a Nation," the Griffith spectacular production, continues to draw crowds to the Majestic, and while it is a remarkable picture and its drawing power is not the least of its attractions.

ST. JAMES THEATRE—Heading a bill of unusual excellence is "Nine Kentucky Girls," presented as a miniature musical comedy. This is an exceptionally capable company of young women and an irresistible comedian. Bertha Creighton & Co. present a one-act sketch that is a gem. Others on the bill are Margaret Haney and Frank Weston, in new songs and dances; Bessie Wallace and Co., and the Great Johnson displayed his cleverness in comedy juggling; the latest Pathe motion picture features of Myra," and J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Man of the Immortals."

GLOBE THEATRE—One of the brightest playlets of the season is the feature offering, "What Man Needs," presented by Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Hill & Co. Carson & Willard present their original comedy sketch, "At the Bulletin Board." Others on the bill include Horn and Ferris, musical comedy hits; Crawford and Broderick, songs and fun; and Rosamond & Co. dance spectacle.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE—"Girls," Clyde Fitch's brilliant comedy, was given successful opening performances. It is one of the most fascinating comedies that has been seen at John Craig's playhouse in some time. The story deals with the experiences of three girls, who give up all thought of romance for the pursuance of careers. But the usual discipline of being shattered comes into their lives, and until the lowering of the final curtain the author has a merry time. The principals are Dorris Olsson, Justine Adams and Dorothy Dickinson, as the three heroines, made a triple hit, while David Herblin proved that he is an actor of ability. The stage settings were well portrayed.

FRANKLIN PARK THEATRE—Fred J. Keenan appears at the Franklin Park in a powerful picture entitled "Paddy Reilly," the episode of "The Iron Claw" are being shown here, also "Mysteries of Myra." There are four good vaudeville acts on the bill.

ORPHEUM THEATRE—The main feature of the Orpheum bill is a pretentious musical company of beautiful young women and young men, who present an act that has all the elements of a musical comedy. There is a big scenic setting representing a race track, and the young women were dazzling contrasts in dainty dames (buff) and Mercedes Lorenz offers a mainly classical clever act in "Antiseptic Love." Drew Pates and company present a bright comedy, "Pat and Patrick." Included in the balance of the bill are Ashley and Morgan, comedians and singers; the Ogden sisters, Fegy and Hazel, jugglers and comedians; Bryan and Ryan, singers and dancers. Dorothy Gish appears in the photoplay "Susan Rocks the Boat."

PARK THEATRE—The triple bill is topped by John Mason, Boston's favorite actor in "The Reaper," in five acts. Ethel Clayton in a six-real picture, "Dollars and the Woman," follows, and Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance," is an added feature. The usual instrumental and vocal numbers complete the works in an unusually enjoyable program.

MODERN THEATRE—William Fox presents the thrilling "Battle of Hearts," of which William Farnum is the starring actor. It has the salt tang of the sea, and Mr. Farnum plays the part of a fearless, red-blooded fisherman, in love with the daughter of a fisherman. The girl has centred her affections on the worthless son of a lighthouse keeper, and of the fisherman, desperate, put to sea in a storm. He is cast up on the beach unconscious, where he is found by a band of French Canadians, of whom the favored lover is a member. Exciting episodes follow, which culminate in a desperate fight between the rivals. Victorious, the fisherman wins his love at last. On the same bill Paramount Pictures offers George Fisher in "Paddy."

COPLEY THEATRE—"A Revolutionary Wedding," a story of the French Revolution, besides presenting the talented actress, Betty Nansen, is the feature of the week. The play displays an elaborate staging of costuming, manners and costumes of the romantic French of a period. With the picture is shown another of a lighter but none the less interesting character, "Little Sunbeam," a delightful story by Charles E. Van Loan, with Gordon Griffith as the hero—outstripping typical American kid. The Hearst-Vitagraph Weekly, unfamiliar war scenes, and Miss Dorothy Fairbanks as soprano soloist. Miss Mae Conklin as violinist and of the beautiful dance of Miss Hazel Bundy add zest to the program.

Sox Show Improvement Tigers Not So Terrible

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

Shortly after 1 o'clock today the Red Sox management announced that this afternoon's game with the Detroit Tigers had been postponed on account of cold weather and wet grounds.

The Sox were anxious to play, as they believe they have the Tigers on the run, but conditions made a contest practically impossible.

One game doesn't prove much of anything, especially when it was such a freak game as the one won by the Champions yesterday, 2 to 1. It doesn't matter, however, how the runs come if the breaks will only figure once in a while in favor of the home team.

For some days now such a thing as a break in the luck of the game has been unknown. With fifteen men left on bases, three thrown out at the plate and all the hitting that was worth while crowded into the last two innings gives a faint idea of how the Champions are not hitting and how the break goes against them.

The Tigers do not look so formidable at short range. They couldn't hit Gregg and Foster pitching but four off Vean, two of these being doubles batched for a run, and that one off Foster. Gregg passed but one and Foster two and those figured in the score.

Dauss, who pitched for the first time in three weeks having been ill, was a queer mixture of effectiveness and wildness. He gave enough bases on balls, ten, to have lost several games of ball and get away with these figures. It was his final pass, and it moved Jantvin to second after his hit.

WALKER ENCOURAGING.

An encouraging sign for the Champions came in the manner in which Walker hit the ball. His two-baggers were clear-cut drives, and they came at the right time. After having a man on second through all the leading off it was a sad commentary on the hitting strength of the team that he didn't score in the fourth, for the next two men walked, filling the bases, only to have a force play pulled at the plate.

Gregg's pitching was another thing that looked pretty good from a Boston standpoint. The Tigers got four hits off him, bunching the two-baggers, but one of these was more or less a lucky hit. When Veach had met on third on he did in the first and third innings, he pitched good ball and was accorded fine support.

Foster's run during the three innings he worked was in his usual style. He pitched nicely to Dauss, who had doubled off Gregg, and at a time when Burns was at third waiting for the pitcher to come through. Foster fanned him.

The remaining games with the Tigers will be interesting ones for the reason that these teams figure each other as about the best in the league and they realize what a series like this may mean later on.

CHAMPS PICKING UP.

If Manager Carrigan has his pitchers on the mend there will be some victories to record during the next two days. One thing about the game played by the Champions yesterday was their evident desire to win and their life and spirit, even though they didn't pile up the hits. They began to look like themselves and as soon as they do get to feeling that confidence in each other that must be present at all times they will start climbing.

Jennings has a big string of pitchers to send against Boston, among them being Dubuc, Boehler and Cunningham, so the games that are set to be played will have to be fought for with all the aggressiveness that is possible to produce. While Ty Cobb didn't make any great noise in the first game, that is no reason to suppose he will not.

Ty is likely to cut loose any minute and tear victory from the grasp of the Champions. He hit in tough luck for him, but you must figure that hits that left field are apt to find their way into Duffy Lewis's gloved hand. The Alameda kid made two nice catches off Tyrus.

Bush is equal to the occasion at all times and recalls the period in baseball when they played two men at shortstop. Bush is just about two as a shortstop and a infielder. Vitt plays a nice game at third, while Burns is a fine first sacker. His play on Gardner with Dauss was about as fine as seen here this season.

Stanage is among the best catchers in the game, so while the Tigers are not batting down the ball they know how, and Ty Cobb isn't in his stride, it would be well to be on guard at any minute and so prepare to meet them. The fans of Boston enjoy seeing a game with Detroit as the good sized crowd of 5788 for a Monday attested. All that the Champions need to do to please the people into Fenway Park is a few games won in a row.

Barry and Lewis haven't been hitting of late. They are about the Hooper and Hobby with Gardner and now Janvrin and Walker, should make it mighty interesting with the pitching. The World Beaters even in their hitless period looked a whole lot better than they have for two weeks.

Tonight the members of both teams attend the annual ball of the Knights of Columbus, Mt. Benedict Council No. 75, Somerville.

SIDELIGHTS
BY HERMAN NICKERSON

It takes hits to win ball games after all. Bunching a couple twice put the champions on the right end of the score, after having had ten bases on balls handed to them, leaving for the game fifteen men on bases.

* * *

In the first six hits made during the game, three of them were doubles. Walker got two for the day, Bush, Carrigan, Young and Dauss the others.

* * *

Bush can cover all the ground necessary for any shortstop. He ran into left field for a couple that were fine catches.

* * *

Lewis hit the ball hard enough for a slashing single to centre in the third, but Dauss' shoes were in the way and the ball glanced off to Young, who threw Duffy out.

* * *

Walker's first double was a slam high up on the board fence in the left field. Kahnatsch backed away and played it nicely.

* * *

* * *

Faust work by Burns and Dauss in the seventh got Gardner, when Larry drove one that was very hard to handle. Burns made a fine stop and Dauss's work covering first had to be perfect. It was.

* * *

Dauss knocked down a couple of hits to the box that would have changed the score somewhat.

* * *

Cobb didn't have much of a day. Aside from robbing Gardner of a hit, he did little that was spectacular. His hits went into Lewis' hands twice and Janvrin threw him out the last time up. A pass and a stolen base was his portion in the opening inning.

* * *

Hooper played a nice game in the field, getting Heilman's savage drive in the first with two men on and two out. His single scored the first run.

* * *

Walker had his eyes on the ball, getting two fine two-baggers, the second building the winning run in a combination with Janvrin a single.

* * *

Jennings tore grass and shouted as usual, but the crowd didn't seem to mind, taking the proceedings as a matter of course.

Motor Mighties in Shape for First Clash

Although Nat Butler's scheduled program for last Saturday night at Revere was postponed on account of rain, holders of tickets can use them tomorrow night, when the same card will be put on.

Victor Linart, who won the bulk of the "special" events last season, is in great form and confident of repeating his early wins of a year ago. George Wile demonstrated in his workout yesterday he possesses the same speed which made him such a big favorite in the past. Then, "Bobby" Walthour, the veteran of the trio in the 25-mile event, put in a hard day's work and reports himself in good condition.

There will be the usual open amateur and handicap races and professional events in the opening card. The pros are already working out on the south track and Logan, Loftus, Thurville and the other stars of last year are bound to find the "going" much harder.

PITCHERS SHOWING BETTER

Braves Look More Formidable as Hurlers and Hitters Get Better; St. Louis Again Today.

St. Louis, May 22.—When the Braves lost five out of six in Pittsburgh and Cincinnati the miracle man was showing a frown, but in two games against the Cardinals George Stallings now realizes that his outfit simply fell into one of those slumps which is common even to world's champions. Stallings feared the pitchers were off colored, and he longed for that famous trio, Tyler, Rudolph and James. But in the last eighteen innings the Braves have received pitching that makes them dangerous for first place again.

George Tyler turned out a two-hit game Sunday, and Monday Tom Hughes came back with eight ciphers and three hits. He carried a load of 5 to 0 and eased up the ninth. The result: six hits and five runs for the Cardinals, but of course they were short when the last man was retired.

Not only are the Braves showing improved pitching, but they have been hitting timely here, and yesterday they ran nine hits up to eight runs. Only one hit in the game was wasted, which is bunching them in the right spots. A triple by Evers and a homer by Doles produced two runs in the ninth and in the eighth five hits were bunched for six runs.

BUT ONE WASTED.

Evers singled, Wilhoit singled, Smith singled, Compton doubled and Gowdy doubled. In the melee Beaher muffed Maranville's liner and Kelly was hit, so the only hit wasted was a single by Kenny in the seventh.

The Braves were famous in 1914 for just such tricks. Their defence was perfect and they had but one 300 hitter, he was Joe Connolly. Still they won the pennant and it takes tight pitching and some timely hits to win for a club that is not like the Giants Stallings knows too that his Braves today have not reached their top form. He misses Sherwood Magee.

That club would miss sherry, and Stallings also is waiting for Bill James to report himself ready to pitch. With these two the Braves figure to give the Giants their rub, for of course Alexander comes along and duplicates his 1915 figure of thirty-one victories.

The Cardinals have fallen into a slump. They were in third place a week ago, but with six straight defeats they are hanging on to seventh, but a few points in front of the Pirates.

The Braves went on a mad rampage in the eighth and put over six runs. Beaher missed Maranville's fly. Evers laid down a safe bunt, Wilhoit singled, Konetchy was hit, Smith singled and Compton and Gowdy bunched doubles.

Hughes let up in the ninth. He also tightened up just in the nick of time, as the Cardinals got to him for six clean hits and registered five runs in a terrific hurry.

But just when Rudolph was going to be rushed to Hughes' rescue, "Thin Tom" pulled himself together and saw that the noisy inning came to an end.

Up to the ninth round Hughes was in a fair way of duplicating Tyler's shutout performance of the previous afternoon. Nary a Cardinal had made the circuit and the blows of him totaled but three.

Griff Denies Hon. Walter for Sale

WASHINGTON, May 22.—"It's ridiculous; there's absolutely no chance of the Washington club selling Walter Johnson to Cleveland or any other club." So stated Manager Griffith when asked concerning the report from Cleveland that "President Dunn was angling for Johnson and was prepared to pay a record-breaking figure for the king.

Griffith denied in emphatic terms that he has as much as been asked by Dunn to put a price on Johnson.

What Cleveland Says.

Cleveland, May 22.—"Of course, the Cleveland club will buy Walter Johnson's release if it gets the chance," states President Dunn. "We are willing to pay big money, but the price must be fair."

INTELLECT WILL TELL

What makes the Braves so swift and strong today?

What mystic magic leads them on to play?

What fills them so with vigor, verve and brawn?

"Did the Reds win again?" he was asked.

"No," he replied. "The Braves lost."

Clabby and McGourty are not the first two ring rivals to become business associates. For instance, there is the business firm of Langford and Jeannette.

Messrs. Clabby and McGourty are running a handbook in Sydney, having discovered that it is easier to rob the public's kale with the naked hook than it is with a boxing glove.

The Shakespeare-Bacon controversy has been decided by a court of law. The contention that Alexander was a greater general than Caesar and that Washington was a greater statesman than Lincoln, and vice versa, has been settled in short order by approximately 800,000 debating societies. But we have before us today a conundrum which constrains us to pause and reflect: "Was Amos Rusie's fast one," we are asked, "as fast as Walter Johnson's?"

Starting an investigation, we interviewed an athlete who once had played against the said W. Johnson.

"You have batted against Walter Johnson, have you not?"

"Yes—once."

"Did he hand you any fast ones?"

"Yes—three."

"How fast were they?"

"I don't know. I never saw them."

CONSOLATION.
(By C. Comiskey).

Though it fills me with vexation,
There's a certain consolation
As I gaze upon the latest White Sox score;
As I gaze upon the standing,
They are on the bottom landing,
And they cannot tumble downward any more.

Merry Battle in Sight Long Runs to Be Close

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

THE scramble for points in the distance events, the one and two-mile runs, at Saturday's session of the Intercollegiates should be well worth watching, for, on what local fans have seen, it appears as if chance of also winning the two-mile, providing he also starts in the longer event.

These predictions, however, will not stand if Wilson, the Leland Stanford of a year ago in the two-mile. Considering the two distance races from every angle, Yale stands a clear chance of gathering eight, nine or ten points, while Cornell should annex as many if not more.

Overton's best time for the mile is 4:23 2-5, and prior to leaving California Wilson has stepped the route in 4:20. Last Saturday, at Ann Arbor, Wilson did the mile in 4:19 and won quite handily. Widnagle is Cornell's best bet at a miler. He and Wilson have clashed before, having met in competition on the Pacific Coast.

Hubbard hopes to win the mile will be carried by R. D. Campbell, who has been caught in 4:24 2-5. Brown of Tech is capable of 4:25 and can be figured among those apt to gather one of the lower places. Irish of Cornell ran fifth in the race last year and many think he can at least repeat. Ball of Maine, Tucker of Dartmouth and Carroll of Michigan all figure in the scramble.

Should Overton attempt to start in the two-mile, as well as the one-mile, his contest with Potter of Cornell, last year's winner, should be a dandy.

WHEN POTTER SET PACE.

Before the meet last season a majority of the experts were certain Overton would win. He encountered no stiff a pace, however, set by Potter, he had absolutely no chance to get up and was forced to rest content with four points for his share.

Cornell should add a few more points to its total in this race with J. S. Hoffmire, who was the winner two years ago. Hoffmire looks good enough to repeat his race of last year. Corwith, also of Cornell, might figure in fourth or fifth place, but to do so he must stave off such runners as Coop of Brown, Pretti of Maine, Donnell of Michigan, Young of Yale and Davison of Harvard.

It seems fair to believe Potter can repeat in the two-mile and that both Widnagle and Hoffmire can run second in their respective races. If that should happen the Ithacans are certain of eleven points. Should Overton fail to defeat Wilson he can scarcely run worse than second, and consequently, Cornell's share is dropped back a point.

YALE IS IN GOOD.

By finishing second in each race, Overton gathers eight points for Yale and should he win one another point goes to Eli. Thus the scramble for point honors in those two races should be one of the big features, Leland Stanford, a team which a great many figure to win the meet, can hardly do better than score five points as a result of the distance events, inasmuch as it only starts Wilson in the mile.

From New Haven comes word that Overton will go out Saturday in an effort to lower John Paul Jones' intercollegiate record for the mile. That would indicate that in the minds of the Eli track men there is no question of his ability to defeat Wilson and Widnagle.

IT'S UP TO J. MACK.

However, the impression is prevalent at New Haven Overton may not attempt to run in both races, the opinion is that the effort might be too much for him and that a collapse would follow the attempt.

Between the time the mile is finished and the time the call is given for the two-mile more than three-quarters of an hour will elapse. It that should be considered a sufficient length of time Johnny Mack will send his distance crack back in the effort to gather additional points for Eli and possibly win the meet.

RUMOR HAS SKIDS UNDER ROWLAND

Chicago, May 23.—Rumors were afloat in Chicago today that Charles Comiskey, president of the White Sox, is contemplating a change of managers. The Old Roman, it is said, is discouraged at the miserable showing of the White Sox, who on paper stack up as probably the best team in the American League.

If a change in managers is made a thorough and complete reorganization of the South Side club will also be effected, according to reports.

Whether the reported change involves elevating a man from the ranks to the managership was not learned, but it is rumored that Eddie Collins is being looked on with favor for the job.

Griffiths-Beecher Bout Lightweights Top Bill

CONSIDERABLE interest is attached to Boxer Johnny Griffiths' appearance in the ring at the Arena tonight. The Akron, O., lightweight, "the boy with the lightning left," brought on for a 12-round muss with Willie Beecher, the plump little New Yorker, is generally raised out in the Middle West one of the undoubted stars of the 135-pound class and a near-champion.

Willie Bernie Strapp, Griffiths' manager, claims his charge has gone to the post sixty-five times, including three successful starts in Australia when "Snowy" Baker showed him in that country in 1914, and fails to have the L. mark embodied in Johnny's record, truth it is the big bulk of his work has been done in Ohio and Wisconsin arenas where decisions are not permitted.

Still, when such rare, good boxing office as Ed Smith and Sam Hall of Chicago, Tom Andrews of Milwaukee, Harry McDaniel of Cleveland and Joe Nolan of Cincinnati put their O. K. on Griffiths, it is a sure thing he cannot be any false alarm.

Griffiths has belabored Leach Cross, Johnny Harvey, Joe Shugrue, Joe Mandot, Hughie Mehegan, Jimmy Duffy, Matt Wells and Joe Azevedo among other fairly renowned operators in the lightweight class. He likewise held his own with Hon. Fred Welsh, not once, but twice; in fact, his clippings to show that in his last out with the slipping Britisher he was the best boy in the scrap.

As for Beecher, whom he boxes here tonight, Griffiths got the award over him in the 12-round bout, just some six weeks ago. Then, Willie Ritchie, the ex-champion, was held to a deal best by the Akron Flash.

The three preliminaries are well manned, with two running eight rounds, which is a new arrangement. Phil Powers, who has been on the sick list the past fortnight, expects to be able to divide the work with "Eagle Eye" Maffitt Flaherty.

Griffiths is said to be the owner of one of the liveliest left hands in the game. Likewise is his right mitt of 18-karat hue, according to report. It's only fair to expect a corking good performance from the newcomer, and if Beecher, who proved himself a right pert performer in his recent battle with Johnny Harvey comes into the ring trained properly, the scrap should be replete with action, in fact, one of the busiest, ditto just about the best, of the season.

ARMORY A. A. PROGRAM.

Johnny Griffiths, Akron, O., vs. Willie Beecher, New York, 12 rounds, 135 pounds 5 p. m.

Charley Byers vs. Tommy McFarland 8 rounds.

Jim McDonald vs. "Sailor Bob" Hardy, 8 rounds.

Jeff Gallant vs. Johnny Donovan, 8 rounds.

Referees—Phil Powers and Maffitt Flaherty.

"RIP" HAGERMAN ZIPPED.

Cleveland, May 22.—President Dunn of the Indians announces that "Rip" Hagerman, the former Cub and Coast League hurler, has been unconditionally released.

Y.M.H. League Opens Season on May 30

The baseball season of the Associated Y. M. H. A. League will open for the Summer on May 30. The following associations will have teams represented in the league: West End, South End, Malden, Chelsea, Everett and Lynn. The teams will meet each other twice and the season will extend through the latter part of August.

The following men have been selected to umpire the games: Benj. H. Eskin, Victor Commanday, Anthony Mortali and Mike Braff.

Israel Ruby, the athletic director, will have charge of the management of the league and is desirous of securing the names of two or three more men to act as umpires.

The official scheduled games for the opening day are: 10 o'clock South End vs. West End; Everett at Chelsea; Lynn at Malden.

Mr. Ruby earnestly hopes that proper support will be given by the members of the different associations to their particular teams. He says that this season the league will excel all other athletic activities conducted by his department.

Those desiring further information may obtain same by addressing Israel Ruby, 73 Tremont street, Boston.

FRANK GLICK GETS BERTH

Princeton, N. J., May 23.—Frank Glick, ex-Brown athlete, has signed to coach the Mercersburg Academy eleven next Fall.

RING REMARKS

Lightweights Johnny Griffiths and Willie Beecher, who clash at the Arena tonight, have already had three encounters. Twice they went twelve rounds at Akron, O., Griffiths' home town, and some six weeks ago staged the same distance at Cleveland. Two were no-decision affairs, while Griffiths got the four decision rendered.

The boys at Charlestown are mighty excited over Hardy of the U. S. A. Cutter, who goes on with Jim McDonald in one of the eight-rounders. Bob is a rugged boy and said to be mighty handy with the gloves.

The Tommy McFarland-Charley Byers bout won't embrace much action. Still, it should be some warm fun; in fact, may prove one of the riots of the season.

Johnny Donovan, the crack young South Boston featherweight, who has only lost one bout in some thirty starts since joining the pros, hooks up with Jeff Gallant in the curtain-raiser. The one verdict Johnny lost, bung up against him at Providence last week, was particularly bad one, according to Joe O'Rourke, his manager, and the Providence fistic critics as well.

"Mickey" Brown of Malden and Johnny Goldberg of Brooklyn, two 122-pound batsmen, clash at the Commercial A. C. Friday night. They met in Brooklyn some eighteen months ago, Goldberg scored down in the first round, and again in the second, and still "Mickey" made an even affair of it.

Joe Eagan, late of the house of F. Mark, meets Harry Gattle of Fort Chester, N. Y., at North Adams Saturday night.

Georges (Knock Out) Brown, the Chicago Greek? is back from Australia. He had two battles with Les Darcy while in Kangaroo land, and while both went against him, the Greek claims he came close both times and is a vastly improved all-round glovesman.

LAST NIGHT IN THE RING.

Philadelphia, May 23.—Johnny Dundee, the New York lightweight, was entirely too fast for "Buck" Fleming in their six-round bout at the Dundee's encounter all the way.

New Bedford, May 23.—Young Brice of this city and Billy Fitzsimmons of New York went eight rounds to a draw.

Rochester, N. Y., May 23.—Rain caused a postponement of the "open air" bout between Tony Ross and Bill Brennan.

New York May 23.—Bantamweights "Dutch" Brandt and "Kid" Taylor boxed ten hard, even rounds at the Military A. C. Brooklyn.

Woonsocket, R. I., May 23.—Pete Hartley of Brooklyn decisively defeated Young Bladen of this city in twelve rounds. Bladen went down for the count in the sixth round.

Portsmouth, N. H., May 23.—"Battling Al" Nelson of Manchester outpointed Kart Beers of Washington in ten rounds at the Ro-king-ham A. C. Eddie Flynn of Peabody, and "Sailor Joe" Starts fought eight rounds.

London, May 23.—Pat O'Keefe, middleweight champion of England, lost to Bandsman Blake in twenty rounds at the National Sporting Club.

New York May 23.—Young Tost lost a ten round bout to Jimmy Duffy. Allie Nack knocked out Frank Lippy in the fourth round.

Denver, May 23.—Chick Hayes of Indianapolis lost a twenty-round decision to Benny Chaves.

Memphis, Tenn., May 23.—Jack McCarron outpointed Tommy Burke in eight rounds.

SOCCER SHOTS

THE semi-final State cup game between the Beverly and Fore River teams as arranged by the emergency committee of the State association will be staged at Hibs field, Cooper street, Lynn, on Saturday.

* * *

TO make the semi-final State cup game as neutral as possible with all its fringes of the National Series, George Lambie has been appointed as referee with S. McIntyre and H. Ritchie also of the Boston Referees Association as linesmen.

* * *

AFTER a lengthly season owing to weather conditions the soccer season of 1915-16 is nearing its close, as the American cup series will wind up with Bethlehem against the Scottish Americans next Sunday, and one week later the State cup series will wind up with the winner of the Beverly-Fore River game against Lynn Poms.

* * *

THE Peter J. Peel (first vice-president of the U. S. F. A.) trophy emblematic of the Western soccer championship has been awarded to the Chicago Americans, who on Sunday defeated the Joliet Steel team in one of the hardest games of the season 2 goals to 1.

* * *

SOCCER fans as well as cricketers will regret to learn of the death of Tom Cliffe, a useful member of the National Challenge Cup Committee and delegate in the U. S. F. A. In connection with the Columbia Oval Soccer and cricket teams had been long and continuous, even though he aspired to nothing more than a true lover of wholesome sports.

* * *

THE high cost of living has evidently struck the members of the National Referees Association, who are looking for a raise in fees in the national cup competition. Well if this means better refereeing they are worth it even though the game is not in the producing class as yet.

* * *

IT looks now as if it will be a few years more before some club will be able to wrest the championship from Bethlehem. As a team it is in a class by itself and is capable of defending itself against the best teams in the old country. Good luck to the Champions of 1915-16.

PEET PAYS TRIBUTE TO CREW MANAGER

Dr. Walter Peet, the AMERICAN'S rowing expert, pays a much deserved tribute to Sam Felton, manager of the Harvard crew, when he says the Saturday's regatta was "the best conducted regatta we have ever had." The doctor also includes Mr. Felton's valued assistants.

Felton, aided and abetted by Percy S. Howe, assistant manager, who conducted the regatta, saw to it that the public were able to follow the races from start to finish. Charts on the Harvard Bridge and a somewhat similar service at the Union Boat House furnished the waiting crowds with stroke-by-stroke service, which was relayed by "wigwag" men stationed in the John Harvard who were abreast of the racing.

200 Entries For Motorcycle Club Run

At least 200 motorcycles will take part in the Bay State Motorcycle Club's 1,000-mile endurance run from Boston to Buffalo and return May 28, 29 and 30, according to R. C. Straube.

The run has been sanctioned by the Federation of American Motorcyclists and will be run under the rules set down by that organization. The preliminary statement by the Bay State Club states that the object of the run is to demonstrate the reliability and practicability of the motorcycle for long distance touring and pleasure. It is open to all amateurs and professionals.

There will be several classes of motorcycles, for light and heavy machines and amateurs and professional riders.

Merchandising prizes valued at $2,000 will be given to the winners.

7 ENTRIES REFUSED FOR AUTO CLASSIC

Indianapolis, May 23.—With the arrival of Dario Resta, practice has settled down to a serious business at the Indianapolis motor speedway, for the sixth annual event, May 26, Resta has won every big event in the U. S. A., except the Indianapolis classic.

For the first time in the history of automobile racing there have been repeated attempts to get post entries in the Indianapolis event. The seven who are disappointed are Ralph De Palma, with his Mercedes; Devlin, Gleason, with his Olsen; Adams, with his Adams Special; Ira Vail, with his Hudson; the Super-six Hudsen that Mulford tried to get in, and a car from Detroit.

HARVARD PERSONALS

THE varsity crew resumes practice this afternoon. While one or two changes are being predicted in the eight, there will probably be no rearrangement just now.

* * *

"FINE, boys, fine!" was Coach Herrick's salutation after Saturday's varsity victory, "but it's Yale we're after. This race is only a stepping stone."

* * *

BILL HAINES now has a real feather to wear in his dinky little "pancake" cap of crimson. "It's a real mascot," at least so Bill thinks.

* * *

THE way that Coaches Mitchell of Harvard and Clarke of Princeton behaved on the bench Saturday is described as peaceful as a revival of no-armed deaf and dumb folks.

* * *

CAPTAIN FRED MURRAY and Meredith House, Stanford's crack dash men and star hurdlers, had a big gallery following their doings in the gallery following their doings in the flirtations will indulge in some strenuous work on Soldiers field.

* * *

* * *

ED. BROWN is receiving congratulations over the slick way the Harvard sophomores ran away from the "so called" Yale junior crew Saturday. The sophs won by four lengths and at the speed they were traveling would probably have chased up any other crew on the river that afternoon.

TECH. SHINES ON COURTS.

Tech. made a clean sweep of its tennis matches with Brown, on Jarvis Field, 6-0. Woodbridge, Stewart, Swain and Neuman scored in the singles, while the successful pairs were Stewart-Woodbridge and Swain-Carr.

TODAY'S COLLEGE GAMES.

Yale vs. Rivers at New Haven.
Wesleyan vs. Lafayette at Middletown, Ct.
Mass. Aggies vs. Middlebury at Middlebury.

GLICK TO COACH MERCERSBURG TEAM

Princeton, May 23.—Frank Glick, captain of the Tiger eleven last Fall, will have full control of football at Mercersburg Academy this Fall. The Pennsylvania institution has been anxious to secure Glick for some time, and just recently induced him to sign a one-year contract.

Glick will be in charge of football at Mercersburg only one year, as he intends to enter business in New York city this Winter.

At a meeting of the Tiger football candidates here it was definitely decided to open practice next year on September 12. "Speedy" Rush, Captain Hogg and Trainer Fitzpatrick addressed the prospective candidates.

Their Married Life

Winifred Wakes Up in Pain and Warren and Helen Have a Busy Time

HELEN was genuinely tired as she told herself over the telephone and mentally prepared to go to sleep. It had been a wearisome day, but everything was finished now. All the rooms were in order and the Simmler slips had been put on the tapestry chairs and davenport. Warren had finally admitted that he liked the guest room much better than the den, and Helen felt at last that her efforts had not been in vain.

Warren's regular breathing told her that he had fallen asleep. She stands, and with a little sigh she nestled closer, unknowingly, to the warmth of the silk comforters and closed her eyes.

It seemed hours later that she woke suddenly, conscious that something was wrong. She listened for the second that had wakened her. "I could it be Winifred?" The thought made her slip softly from the bed and pull a bathrobe around her. She hurried into Winifred's room and, as she did, heard again the sound that had wakened her. It was an ominous sound—a sound that filled her heart with terror as she quickly turned on the light.

Winifred was crouched up in the corner of the bed, her face dark and flushed and her breathing choked and gasping. She was too ill to raise her head from the pillow, and Helen flew over to the bed and raised the child's head on her arm.

Winifred opened her eyes.

"What is it, dear?" said Helen in an agony of fear. She hardly knew what she was saying, and the words were useless, for Winifred could not speak. Only that horrible, hoarse gurgle came again, and Helen, propping the child's head as high as she could against the pillow, hurried over to the telephone.

"What is it?" called Warren. "Is anything wrong?"

"It's Winifred, dear; she can't breathe. I don't know what to do," and Helen almost cried as she leaned against the door for a moment in a spasm of weakness. Warren sprang from the bed hurriedly.

HELEN HURRIES TO THE PHONE

"I'll telephone for the doctor," he said, making for the door.

"No, I will, dear; you go in and hold her head up as high as you can. She seems easier when her head is high. I think she has croup."

Helen watched Warren cross over to the bed and tenderly raise the tumbled little figure in his arms. Even all the maternal in her nature leaped to the front as she flew to the telephone and called Dr. Marshall.

"O, Dr. Marshall, isn't this Dr. Marshall?" And her voice was a wail. "Who is it, dear? This is Mrs. Curtis. I have one of the apartments upstairs. Yes, Elise. I thought you would know me. Winifred, my little girl, is ill. The doctor isn't there? You don't know where he is, do you? All right, I must get some one else right away. Good-by."

Helen rang off and thought a minute. She would have to call Dr. Bradley. Warren had discontinued calling in Dr. Bradley after Dr. Marshall had become friendly with the family, but this was no time for hesitating—they must have a doctor at once. Warren had called Dr. Bradley and was now talking to him.

"Dr. Bradley says he will be right over," he said, shortly. "Keep her well covered up and try to get some sleep yourself—it's over now—there's no more worry."

"Who was the cranky old duck?" said Warren, slipping his arm about Helen as she leaned against him, and they stood looking down at Winifred, who was breathing easily now.

"I don't know, dear—none one I found listed under the A's in the telephone book. I never asked him how much his call was either, but of course he will send his bill. Whatever should we have done without him, dear?"

"Don't think about it," said Warren, huskily; "you'd better lie down here by Winifred and get some sleep. You're all fagged out."

HER STORY ABOUT THE NEW REMEDY

Mrs. J. E. Glidden, of Concord, Mass., Gives a Testimonial to the Plant Juice Man.

As a strengthener and builder-up of the system, there is nothing to equal Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic. This wonderful remedy, which has taken the whole country by storm, is made from the juices and essences of medicinal plants, gathered from many parts of the world, and combined with great skill into the best remedy known for all ailments of the stomach, liver and kidneys. It purifies the blood, aids digestion, strengthens weak nerves and revitalizes the whole body.

Daily signed testimonials are being received relative to the benefits derived from this great preparation. One of the latest is that of Mrs. J. E. Glidden, who resides on Kirby Street, Concord, Mass., and is a well known and popular lady of that town, as well as having many friends in this city. She says:

"For 14 years I had suffered from indigestion and dyspepsia; all the food I ate would ferment in my stomach and cause gas to form there. I was badly constipated, had headaches, dizzy spells, my liver was torpid and sluggish, and I would not sleep at night. I had such pains from gas. I lost daily in weight and became ill a very weak state. I heard of Plant Juice and after taking four bottles it has got my entire system in fine condition. I can now eat any and any kind of food I want to and sleep the night through. I am grateful to Plant Juice for it has cured me and I am telling all of my friends what a fine medicine Plant Juice is."

Plant Juice acts like magic in stomach trouble, gas formentation, heavy, distressed feeling after meals and on retiring. It attacks and destroys all poisons in the blood, corrects diseased conditions of the liver and kidneys and restores them to normal condition.

The Plant Juice Man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.

A Dangerous Fashion

DOG AND GIRL PORTRAITS

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1910, by International News Service.

If you happen to look like this, then you are all right | But if plain, your dog is likely to be more beautiful than you.

HERE is a dangerous fashion! I who love dogs, who have had merry days of comradeship with them, who have found, since I can remember, their friendship a thing to take joy in, who have never feared one or known in them anything but gentleness and loyalty, who believe in caring rightly for the ones I own and making my neighbor care for his (you who fear dog-bite and never dream that an animal drinks as plants and humans do, remember that a man goes mad for a drink) understand that women who are really fond of dogs are so because they have a good heart for anything that flies from a flower and a baby to even a faulty man.

It is rather a bromide to say over and over what is so much trumpeted abroad—she'd much better have a little child where that little dog sits!" Anyway, I shouldn't say it if I thought that—for how can you dare to know just why she hasn't a little child there—and when you see a woman reach for any live thing with gentle fingers and kind eyes you can know it takes a long time to measure the bigness of her heart.

Let me tell you. A beautiful woman I know with a warm-gold colored head of hair, big hazel eyes, generous lips, and a big heart, lives in a big house with her husband and two little woolly dogs. Some of her friends shrug shoulders when she gives glimpses of the great care and affection she gives these two little pups who look to me as if they would break—since I like a big dog best—but they are the ones who do not know her well. Because she is so kind and lavish of care on these two small things that happen to be one of her house is just the reason she would be lavish of affection with ANY creature that lived in it.

She rescues fallen baby birds. She labors with drivers who work lame horses. She feeds her neighbors' cats when they fail to remember that the animals they own must eat to live. Her eyes are wide for any misery in all the animal world and she is brave enough to speak and act.

Now, look at the sound heart of her, the true mother heart. She works without dream of pay, and gives without a thought both money and precious time—for she keeps a big house, a perfect home—to a child nursery that would be a forlorn affair but for her and a group of women like her. She turns and looks at every child that passes her on the street—even if he's lost under a layer of grime. She has not any of her own. She adopted a little blue-eyed mite; and gave it back from the pity of her big heart when its mother begged for it under changed fortunes. And the big tears swam in her eyes when she remembers it.

If you see a picture of a woman with a white pet dog beside her would you dare to say that old trite phrase that is not new, "Better a little child—anybody's little child in the picture?" Give me the woman who loves animals, who picks up a flower thrown away on a dusty street with its tender bloom in the dirt, who grieves over all pain and blotting out of life, who likes the little grubby, homely child just as warmly as the fussed-up baby in frills and rosebuds. She is a good lover. And these things go together.

Now to laugh. It's a dangerous fashion just the same! It is all quite right, and the effect of the portrait is charming, if you are a beautiful girl, one of the lucky born, to have your picture taken with your pet dog—be he a plain pup, one of the terror-striking ugly aristocrats, or a handsome thoroughbred.

If he is homely those who see say, "Isn't she lovely—what a contrast!" If he is handsome they say, "What a beautiful dog and girl!" But if you are just one of those neutral-looking girls who are bones-out-at-elbows and blank of expression, who haven't even that life in the eyes that some plain girls have, don't have your picture taken with your dog! Unless it's colorless, too. If he is homely—there's a pair of you! And people will say, "My goodness!" If he is a beautiful dog—the thing is a tragedy. For there are dog faces that would be the whole picture beside some humans. Beauty of eye, luxury of hair, beauty of line and expression, grace and intelligence—your dog would be the picture entire! Go carefully and—can you risk it?—NELL BRINKLEY.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

MAY BE DELICACY OF FEELING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I expect to marry in about six months. We are very much in love and are devoted to one another. Now, this young man is an artist, and I am his pupil, taking instructions at his studio twice per week. Though we are in love and he intends to make me his wife, yet he accepts my money for art instruction. My friend, Jane, says he should instruct the girl he loves so much free and not accept her money. Though I, too, love him very much, I cannot see why he accepts my money for instruction. Please tell us, is he correct in doing so. I do not regret giving him money, as I am making fine headway in my art.

MARY.

I SEE no harm in this young man taking money for the lessons he gives you. Evidently he believes in keeping business and social relations quite separate. If you marry him you will some day share the money he has earned and saved, and if you do not, I think you will prefer feeling that you are not indebted to him for free instruction in art. Unless you have evidence of the fact that he is mercenary and stingy, you can safely put down present course to delicacy of feeling.

Tabloid Tales

What, Mother, in your opinion, is the greatest mistake every man makes?

There is no mistake greater than this, and every man makes it: It is thinking he can fool his wife as easily as he used to fool his mother.

When a woman, Mother, in telling of her husband's life insurance, adds that he has a robust constitution, is that a compliment or a complaint?

Ah, Child, you ask too many questions.

What is tact, Mother Miss?

It is a quality in you which your enemies express by saying you are smooth.

Is it possible, Mother, to fan a dying friendship back to life?

Just as possible, Little One, as it is to start a fire without matches.

At what time, Mother, is it most important for a woman to watch her tongue?

When another woman, My Child, appears with a handkerchief prepared to weep with her.

What, Mother, is meant by the comradeship between men?

I cannot define it, My Child. All I know is that a father feels more free from surveillance when in the presence of his ten-year-old son than when with his six-months-old daughter.

Why, Mother, do men make so much sport over the women's idea of a good meal?

Because, Daughter, after a man has eaten of a meal prepared only for women he is hungry enough to go out and rob the mouse traps.

When he can make the boast that he is, and his women folk will not look at each other with a smile.

TODAY'S BEAUTY HINT

It is not necessary to shampoo quite so frequently if your hair is properly cleansed each time by use of a really good shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that we can recommend to our readers may be prepared very cheaply by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox, obtained from your druggist, in a cup of hot water. This rubbed into the scalp creates a thick lather, soothing and cooling in its action, as well as beneficial to scalp and hair. After rinsing the scalp is fresh and clean, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy.—Advertisement.

To wash your sheerest fabrics—your most delicate laces

Lux is made expressly for Fine Laundering!

It is the finest, most convenient preparation made for washing Laces, Silks, Muslins, Fine Fabrics — for cleansing all the things about which you are most particular.

Lux is the modern form of soap.

Not a chipped soap.

Not a cake.

It is pure essence of soap in flake form.

In an instant the soapiest of lather!

All you do is whisk them into a lather — rich, thick suds; then work the clothes about in the suds to dissolve the dirt. Do not rub. Lux makes rubbing, which is always ruinous to fine fabrics, absolutely unnecessary.

Why Lux is made in flake form

Lux is made in flake form because in these tiny flakes is condensed more real cleansing value than is possible in any other form of soap.

Every flake is pure essence of soap.

In hard or soft, boiling, hot, lukewarm or cold water, Lux gives a profuse, remarkable lather!

In Our Very Wonderful World

THE problem of supplying the soldiers of Italy with fuel while they are battling up in the mountains wholly bare of wood is being met by girls and boys at home. Which shows, too, that the ingenuity of the Germans in solving acute domestic and military problems is matched, at least in this instance, in Italy. The new fuel, in the preparation of which thousands of children are concerned, is called "coal paper," though "paper coal" would do as well.

You know that paper can be compressed to such a solidity that cartwheels have been made from it. Such a consistency of material should burn like coal, and, though information is lacking as to the specific quality of the emergency "coal," the compression is sufficient to render it excellent slow-burning fuel.

In all the big cities of Italy there have been organized bands of boys and who go round and collect all the papers they can find. These are brought to establishments where other boys and girls, under the direction of women teachers, turn these papers into solid rolls and sections, afterwards cut into chunks.

These are packed into individual bags and distributed among the soldiers in the bleak mountains. In case a soldier desires to have a little hot soup or coffee he takes out three or four pieces of "coal paper," and his hot meal is soon ready.

Signalling on the sly is one of the greatest and most important arts of the present war. If a spy in the enemy's camp wants to get into communication with his own men he cannot stand up and wave a flag. He has to think of something much more subtle.

And often, despite his subtlety, he is caught red-handed. Once on the Eastern front the Russians came across a farm hand piling up his cart with hay. Being suspicious, they ransacked the hay—and found nothing. They were just about to ride away when the horse jerked his head and something went "chink" in the nosebag. Result! The discovery therein of a telephone transmitter, with wires stretching over fields to a handy farmstead.

Animals are sometimes made to do the signalling. Once, when the Germans were retreating, they wanted to mark a large country house which they intended for bombard from the air. So they left a white goat tethered on the lawn and when their airmen came over the spot it was easy for them to spot their mark.

Sugar bears something of its history in its name, which is believed to derive, through various modifications—the French sucre, Spanish azucar, and Arabic sakkar—from the Sanscrit, Sharkara. It was in India, apparently, that cane sugar in the dry, granulated state was first prepared. Large quantities of Egyptian sugar were taken into Europe via Venice in the Middle Ages. In comparatively recent times the use of sugar appears to have been unknown. The sweet sap of the Indian cane seems to have been first cultivated in the country extending from Cochin-China to Bengal. Then it was imported to Europe under the name of saccharum, and used in medicine. It was in the seventh century that the art of sugar boiling was carried to China from India, but Europeans taught the Chinese sugar refining.

CREDIT UNION GETS $20,000 FOR FUND

More than $20,000 was raised at the opening banquet of the Massachusetts Credit Union's campaign to secure $50,000 for the purpose of stamping out usury and promoting thrift, held at the Boston City Club last night.

The various teams started their canvass early today. The campaign will last ten days.

Enthusiasm and spontaneous generosity swayed the gathering. Addresses were made by Judge Abram I. Elkus, the newly-appointed United States Ambassador to Turkey; Governor McCall, Mayor Curley, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, Nathan Sallinger, general campaign manager; Judge A. K. Cohen, Max Mitchell, president of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company; Simon Vorenberg, Felix Vorenberg, president of the Massachusetts Credit Union, and Louis E. Kirstein, who acted as toastmaster.

UNKNOWN GIVES $2,000.

The announcement made by Mr. Mitchell that a man who refuses to make his name public contributed the first $2,000, started the ball rolling. Those who contributed $1,000 each were Max Mitchell, Nathan Sallinger, Simon Vorenberg and David Stern. Among those who contributed $500 each were Louis E. Kirstein, J. P. Morse and Leon Strauss.

Nathan Sallinger announced that the organization had been completed and that everybody was now ready to complete the great undertaking. He said that the success of the campaign is assured.

He said that this campaign would go down in history as one of the greatest achievements of the Jewish community of this city.

Felix Vorenberg said in part:

Now, what has the Massachusetts Credit Union done so far?

It has spread the doctrine of credit union and its mission, and has made the credit union known far and wide.

ELIMINATED SUFFERING.

It has been instrumental in starting a number of credit unions, of which there are at present forty-seven active ones in this State, with a membership of nearly 8,000, and it has greatly eliminated the sufferings of men, women and children, besides making them realize the importance of thrift.

What does the Massachusetts Credit Union expect to do?

It expects to spread the propaganda of credit union all over this State and beyond the confines of the State, and with the interest of 8,000 members already awakened, it will constantly be on the alert to create interest in what we are doing, and instead of forty-seven unions we expect to have hundreds of them before very long.

It expects to minimize the differences between capital and labor by giving labor a chance to live decently and comfortably.

It will promote a desire on the part of those who need assistance to avoid becoming charitable objects, and it will therefore aid organized charity.

SEEK TO EDUCATE YOUNG.

It will do everything in its power to make the public understand the work, so that young men and women will have a pretty good idea of our work before they succumb to temptation.

As a man gets on in life, having been reasonably successful in his business, and having provided for his family, it becomes his duty to do something for others. Such a desire on the part of men, I am glad to say, is beginning to make itself felt, and it shows itself by the interest you have taken in the work.

All charitable and philanthropic work is good and praiseworthy, but is there anything that will leave a more lasting impression on ourselves than the satisfaction of having helped others out of darkness into a life of freedom and happiness?

The victims of this miserable loan shark business are crying out to you for help, just as intensely as the victims of the European war. Are we going to ignore their cry?

MITCHELL GIVES $1,000.

Max Mitchell, treasurer of the Massachusetts Credit Union, said:

My interest in this great movement of organizing credit unions is due to twenty years' experience in social service.

I found that many more people are obliged to borrow than the public has any knowledge of. Financial emergencies in the homes of the poor wage-earners very often arise because the difference between their actual earnings and a living wage is so great that at times they face dire distress, in some instances instantaneously, others for a day, a week or a month.

The Massachusetts Credit Union and its affiliated organizations offers to its thousands of members the self-help which we have always felt was needed in this State to save people from charity on the one hand and the loan shark on the other; hence my interest in it from its inception.

The purpose of its campaign is to increase the work of these credit unions a thousandfold, so that they may reach a thousand times as many people.

I am glad to have the opportunity to show my interest in the movement by offering you a subscription of $1,000.

FORGET FORGOT HIS AUTO LICENSE

Tarrytown, May 23.—Because Karle G. Forget of Rosslyn lived up to his name and forgot to bring his automobile license with him he had to pay $10. Forget was arraigned here before Justice Armstrong, who said:

"Where is your card?"

"I forgot it," replied Forget.

"Well, Mr. Forget, for forgetting your card, it will cost you $10. See that you don't forget it the next time you come this way, Mr. Forget."

WATERWAY BILL NOW IN HANDS OF SENATE

Governor McCall's recommendation for consolidation of the Boston Port Directors and the Harbor and Land Commission is subjected to the final test today in the State Senate.

The House of Representatives passed the bill, recommended by the Governor, for the abolition of the two boards and the creation of a new board, to be known as the Massachusetts Commission on Waterways and Public Lands, which would have the duties now vested in the two boards.

But the bill was so amended in the early stages by the House that it now provides that the Port Directors shall be continued as a separate bureau under the new commission, and that the Harbor and Land Commission be retained in office and perform the functions of the Fore River Board.

Active labeling for at least two members of the Harbor and Land Commission is now considered a likely change.

The spectacle of one of the commissioners, George M. Harlow, leaning over the Senate rail, pleading with the Senators not to abolish the job he was in strong contrast with the dignified attitude of the Public Service commissioners, who have lent away from the State House to go before the committee in performing the State's work while their case is hanging in the balance.

MOTHER SEEKING BROCKTON MAN

The AMERICAN has been asked to assist in locating Mabel Blodgett, 19, who has been missing from No. 18 Winter street, Brockton, three months. His mother is about to undergo an operation, from which it is feared she may not recover and continually asks for her son. He is a shoemaker, described as being about five feet seven inches tall, weighs 145 pounds, blue eyes, dark hair and complexion.

BRADY TO TAKE FILMS NEAR BOSTON

"The handwriting is on the wall on the lurid and sensational motion picture," declared William A. Brady, theatrical manager and head of the World Film Corporation, who was in Boston yesterday.

Mr. Brady came over to unfold the plans of his company to a number of picture theatre proprietors, and found a lot of them gentlemen assured that the wild and lurid days of the picture world had gone, to stay, but his opinion is optimistic.

"We are a week ahead of the commotion will begin filming historical subjects around Boston.

You Can Set YOUR OWN Clock Ahead

In Europe They Are Doing It. Why Not Do It for YOURSELF?

Copyright, 1916, by the Star Company.

EVERYBODY has read of the new idea spreading through Europe — setting the clocks one hour ahead to take advantage of extra daylight in Summer.

When a clock is set ahead one hour it is six o'clock by that clock reset, whereas formerly it would have been five o'clock.

Presently a man looking at the clock which says six o'clock when it is really five o'clock jumps out of bed, starts to work and thus saves an hour.

The average human being accustomed to getting up at six would not get up at five, however urged. If the clock tells him it is six o'clock, when it is really five o'clock, he gets up, goes to work and adds one hour to the day's work.

This has been found useful in Europe. It makes the day begin earlier. It gets men to sleep earlier, saving light, increasing efficiency.

It gets people out of bed during the daylight hours when they OUGHT to be out of bed.

It is an excellent idea from every point of view.

Under the old method, the clock stood the same all the year around. No matter where the sun was in the sky, the clock pointed to the hours in a regular way.

Thus in Summer, when days are long and the sun rises early, men have continued getting up and going to bed at the usual hour, instead of adjusting themselves to changing hours of sunlight as they should do—as, for instance, the birds and other animals do.

He who succeeds is the man who USES THE HOURS. Every daylight hour has its value, and can be used for health, for education, for business success.

Here, in the United States, government has not taken up the question of changing clocks to suit the longer day, and it may not do so.

In Europe war has made government and individuals realize the value of time and labor.

In America we go slowly. But, while waiting for government to act, YOU CAN SET YOUR OWN CLOCK AHEAD, even though you do not touch the hands of your clock.

You can make up your mind to let YOUR DAY begin one hour earlier. If you do it you will have this great advantage:

You will be gaining one hour on your competitors. You will be getting ahead in the world at a faster rate, you will be increasing your chances of success by increasing your hours of activity.

To set your clock one hour ahead means NOT "work yourself to death," as many young men plaintively put it. It means that you will take one hour from the darkness of the night and give that hour to the sunlight.

And in one hour of sunlight much can be done. In that added hour of the morning you can exercise, walk, THINK; you can breathe fresh air, can make yourself a stronger, more efficient human being.

If you really have ambition you will set your clock one hour ahead and make the added hour an HOUR OF WORK.

It is well to remember that nobody is working for you EXCEPT YOURSELF. Whatever YOU want, YOU must do.

Whatever you get, YOU will have to produce.

YOU are the slave working FOR YOU.

Your old age and comfort, years from now, and your pleasure and enjoyment in the near future, depend on how your slave, which is yourself, is put to work and kept at work NOW.

There is no doubt that if you owned one thousand slaves you would get them up an hour earlier in the morning and put them to work if you could.

You do own one good slave, the brain in your head, and everything that you get depends upon how intelligently, persistently and consistently you work that slave.

Get your slave up an hour earlier in the morning, put him to work, and see what the result will be.

P. S.—Don't forget, however, when you get your slave up earlier in the morning, to make him go to bed one hour earlier at night. Slaves must sleep regularly or work poorly.

Once-Overs

Get the habit of making weekly bank deposits.

If you find that something you want makes your deposit short, wait until the next week, and take it from me, you probably won't want it then.

It is poor policy to figure to cut your deposit one week, and make up the deficiency next pay day.

Get a little money ahead, and then you will wonder how you could have enjoyed yourself a minute while you were living from one pay day to the next, constantly putting off your creditors, and without a cent to fall back on should you become ill or lose your job.

Food Must Be More Than Fuel

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects

PART TWO.

BEANS and peas are very rich in protein and comparatively inexpensive, but, unfortunately, they both contain bitter extracts and alkaloids which are so irritating to the average stomach and bowels that they cannot be eaten steadily in sufficient amounts to take the place of meat. As an occasional variety in the diet, or as "vegetables," they are extremely useful, but once or twice a week is about as often as they can be eaten in appreciable amounts with comfort and safety.

This, of course, refers only to the dried or ripe "navy" beans and peas; "wax" or "string" beans and green peas are admirable vegetables, but contain only very small amounts of solid nourishment. Cheese, which is a much better substitute, is also spoiled for heavy or serious use by the enzymes and flavoring substance developed in it by the rennet during making and ripening.

It is a good appetizer and variety in the diet, but except in very vigorous individuals or those who have a special aptitude for digesting it, it cannot usually be eaten in amounts exceeding half a pound or a pound a week without troublesome disturbances of the stomach.

Meat, though a splendid fuel, is, however, far too expensive to be eaten in sufficient amounts for that purpose, which would mean about four or five pounds a day, so about two-thirds of our daily fuel has to be supplied by starches, such as cereals, bread, rice, potatoes, cornmeal, etc.

Here again, however, we find this protein or meat problem confronting us, as some of these grains contain not only starch, but also vegetable protein in considerable amounts. And after numerous tests we have finally been driven to the conclusion that the grain which contains the largest amount of this vegetable protein in digestible form is the best grain for bread—that is, two-thirds of our fuel which we take in the form of starch.

The lowest and poorest of all is rice, which contains almost no protein or "meat." Next potatoes, then cornmeal, then barley, then rye, then oats, and, finally, at the top of the list, wheat. Wheat has not only the largest percentage of vegetable meat in it, but also in far the most digestible form.

Oatmeal has only a little less protein, but this, like beans and peas, is mixed with irritating extractives which upset many stomachs, although one can gradually learn to tolerate it in considerable amounts if it is impossible to get anything else.

Rye has much less protein and in still less digestible form, while corn has both small amounts of protein and only about a third or fourth of that digestible in the human stomach.

Our strong instinctive preference for wheat bread, and white bread at that, when we can get it, is one of the highest proofs of our natural intelligence and good judgment.

More Truth Than Poetry

As If War Hadn't Done Enough Already

We learn with pain from the general information column of the Pittsburgh Dispatch that war has seriously affected the peanut trade in Madras. When this news reaches the European capitals the war, of course, will be stopped.

Mr. Bryan has gone back on grape juice. We hadn't noticed it, but the price must have gone up.

Answer: We Don't Know

If we don't get any preparedness out of this war scare, what was the sense in giving it to us?

Many Poems Inspired Ella Wheeler Wilcox Says By Europe's Awful War

Magazine Editor's Charge That Strife Has Failed to Produce Any Worthy Literary Efforts Not Borne Out—Some Striking Examples Given

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1916, by the Star Company.

IN that romantic corner of Manhattan, Washington square, lives Guido Bruno, who publishes an artistic little magazinelet. Despite its growing tendency toward pessimism and decadence, it is ever delightfully entertaining, even as good fruit is appetizing when overripe.

DISASTERS AND POETRY

"In olden times, when a big catastrophe occurred, bringing death to many people and damage to much property, artists and poets promptly took possession of what had transpired, made it a subject for reverie and were transported into a playground of fantasy and inspiration.

"After the earthquake which demolished Lisbon in 1755, an entire literature was created. Poets, on wings of imagination, visited the ruins of the city and themselves felt the power of the mysterious spirits that shook the earth and disturbed the depths of the planet. They wept with those whose most dearly beloved lay buried beneath the debris and voiced in song the praises of the heroism and sacrifice of men and women who were brave enough to forget their own safety, when friends, or even neighbors, were in danger.

"And not long ago, indeed, even a few days after the terrible Chicago holocaust of 1871, poets the country over evinced its inspiration by paying tribute to the heroes of the unseen force which burst its bonds and blazed forth in such mighty power."

Blames Complete Press Reports for Lack of Inspiration in War

After bemoaning the statement (made as a fact) that this war has produced no poetry, Mr. Bruno says:

"And the reason for this is that everything that happens is sobered into sordidness by the press dispatch. Newspapers vie to excel in offering lurid descriptions of the disaster.

"None would deny the merits of the newspaper of today. It renders speedy succor possible and brings relief to the unfortunate. And with our rapid transport facilities, immediate news dispatches are a necessity. But the daily press is killing all dreams, educating a fantasy-lacking race and paralyzing poetical desires.

"Because of it the catastrophe of today is not followed by poesy. We are robbed of the faculty of seeing with our own inner eyes and are compelled to look at everything as thousands of others about us see the same. There is stolen from the disaster and the heroic deed of unselfishness the romance, without which we cannot feel poetically.

"And so we may say unhesitatingly: What is clicked over the wires is lost for Art."

Our gifted, cultured and interesting young editor has taken a morbid and mistaken view of the situation.

Beautiful, notable and striking poems have been written about the war. Not descriptions of its horrors, not detailed accounts of its acts of valor and heroism, such as distinguishes Homer's Iliad and other war epics, because the race, despite this devastating and most brutal of all conflicts, has ceased to admire war or warriors. Every nation on earth today, perhaps with one exception, is ashamed to be thought warlike.

Unconsciously to themselves, the masses of people have outgrown the tastes which made war epics or lyrics popular. And the poets know and feel this. But the poetry which this war has called into life is greater and better than those old recitals of savage conflicts.

One of the most exquisite poems written on this war appeared in the April Good Housekeeping, entitled "The Old Road to Paradise," by Margaret Widdemer. The author is a young poet who has been singing only a few years; but any poet, dead or alive, might be proud to have composed her beautiful lyric. Its thought and its form of expression reveal the true artist and the real poet. Mr. Bruno would do well to read it.

Elsa Barker has written a powerful war poem. I believe it has not appeared on this side of the ocean yet, but it is a poem destined to live, as will most of Elsa Barker's poetical utterances. The title of her poem is "The Anti-Christ." It was read at the Dickens banquet a few months ago and made a profound impression.

Lincoln Colcord, in his "Vision of War," has done a striking piece of literary work. It is Whitman-like free verse and full of large truths; truths which will do humanity far more good to read and consider than all the descriptions of battles to be found in the classic war poems. Then there is another wonderful piece of work by William Samuel Johnson, entitled "The Prayer for Peace." It is high, lofty, stirring, and, like that of Lincoln Colcord, it breathes the spiritual regeneration which is sure to come through war.

Many Poets of Present Will Receive Just Recognition in Future

I would recommend a careful perusal of all these poems to Mr. Guido Bruno. Having read them, he surely would not make his own intellectual powers questionable by saying that our present conditions are "educating a fantasy-lacking race and paralyzing poetical desires." Besides these few poems herein mentioned, many other gems will shine forth when time shakes its sieve and the dust falls through, leaving the jewels within.

There has never been an era in the world's history when the High Brow critic did not exist, bewailing the low literary standards of his day and endeavoring to trace the causes therefor. Poets whose names and methods are now regarded as standards were either abused or ignored by these same High Brow critics; critics whose names are forgotten today, while the poets live.

Precisely so will poets who are writing here and now among us, live and be remembered and loved after the passage of centuries, even though they are not regarded as noteworthy by the critics of the present hour.

The Seeing Eye

By Jane McLean

I WAS a dreamer in deed and thought,
And he had a seeing eye;
We talked of the things in life we sought,
The vision that passed us by.

I asked him what of the things he dreamed,
For my own ideals were fair,
And he drew me a woman sorrow seamed
With a halo around her hair.

He fashioned her hands with roughened skin
Clasping a rose, and then,
I read her eyes and the look within
Told of the sins of men.

He called it "Life," and I looked and knew,
And knowing I breathed a sigh,
For dreams on the heights are chaste and few
Compared with the seeing eye.
